

Local Equestriennes Author Book About Horses

PATRICIA JACOBSON

When baby misbehaves, is out-of-sorts or off his feed, anxious parents can always reach for a copy of Dr. Spock or Gesell. But what do you do when baby is a horse?

Two local equestriennes spent a year pondering this question, and their answer is now in print. It's called "A Horse Around The House," 308 pages of hard-headed, light-hearted information and illustrations on everything you've always wanted to know about horses and questions you shouldn't be afraid to ask before you get one.

The authors, riding instructor and illustrator Patricia Kelly Jacobson and writer Marcia Hayes planned the book as a practical, droll solution to all the basic problems a horseowner faces. And according to Frank Chapot of the U.S. Olympic team, they've succeeded:

"This book does for horse-owners what Dr. Spock has done for a generation of new parents," he writes in his foreword to the book. "The authors have created an extensive horseman's guide, rich in content, replete with the love and pleasure of horses, based on their practical, everyday experience."

There have always been a lot of books about horse care on the market but Jacobson and Hayes felt that none provided the sort of down-to-earth information horse owners wanted.

"Students of mine who owned a dozen books about horses were always calling me up at dinnertime to ask the simplest questions," says Mrs. Jacobson. "After having a couple of roasts burn, I decided to write down the answers."

A Horse Around The House assumes that the new owner knows next to nothing about horses and goes on from there. It caters to the budget-minded as well as the affluent. If your only stable facilities are an old chicken coop and a scraggly acre of pasture, can you cope? Absolutely, say the authors, and their book gives you step-by-step directions on what to do. On the other hand, if you can afford the best, you'll learn how to get the most for your money.

How do you put up an electric fence? How do you keep your unhorsey neighbors happy? How can you find a good blacksmith? The answers are all there, along with the tips on feeding, health and stable management.

"So many people get their ideas about horse care from movies and T.V.," says Mrs. Jacobson, "and it's a big shock when they get him back to the barn and find that he doesn't act like the horses on Bonanza. Horses can be very rewarding, but they're also a lot of work. If you're not prepared for the work it can be disillusioning."

A Horse Around The House details all the equipment one needs for a new horse, the cost of feeding and housing in different parts of the country, the cost of shoeing, showing and veterinary care. Yet it has appeal for the experienced horseman as well as the novice with up-to-date information and easy to follow illustrations on the finer points of horse care.

(This is also the only book out with a comprehensive glossary of horse terms and an appendix listing horse publications, places to send for barn plans and a chart of proper clothes for every occasion.)

Best of all the book is readable — filled with pertinent anecdotes to keep the reader laughing as he learns. "We wanted a book that's fun to read, not just a reference text," says author Jacobson.

The hundreds of illustrations are delightful too, in turn humorous, instructive and fun to look at.

Patricia Jacobson, known to most horse owners in the area, has taught riding at her

Cross View Farm in Kripplush for the past ten years and recently began a stable management course at the community college. In the past she has studied with such distinguished riders as Margaret Cable Self, Otto Hueckenroth and Olympic Riding stars Walter Staley and George Morris. This book marks her formal debut as an illustrator under her maiden name Pat Kelly, a field she put aside ten years ago when young children and a stable full of horses began to occupy her full time.

Her co-author Marcia Hayes is a newspaper and magazine writer now working on her third book. She lives in Lomontville with her three children and two horses.

An autograph party has been planned for August 26 at 4:45 p.m., at the Hurley Tack Shop, co-sponsored by Twine's Catskill Book and Record Shop of Woodstock. The date will be announced in the Freeman in the next few days.

Paltz Student in Magazine

COLLEEN KENYON (BEFORE)

NEW YORK, N.Y. — One of 20 Mademoiselle Guest Editors for 1972, Colleen Kenyon of New Paltz, New York, spent the month of June in New York learning how a fashion magazine is put together, working alongside editors on the August College Issue, in which she appears.

Among the fringe benefits of the month-long apprenticeship, which included a 10-day trip to Finland and the U.S.S.R., was a total Beauty Day, when she was shown by professional skin, hair and make-up experts how to achieve the best look for herself, beginning with good health.

At left, the Skidmore College graduate before the Mademoiselle beauty session.

After the session: light, airy bangs gentling their way into soft, swinging hair with great body. Colleen's coloring was evened out by a light, even touch of the sheerest foundation. Her eyes were softened with a subtle, burgundy-violet — creme shadow — stroked on with a brush from lash to brow, and around the inner and outer corners. Her upper, lower, and corner lashes were coated with mascara. The finishing touch — cheeks and lips glossed — with a sheer tint. The make-up artist who accentuated Colleen's good looks was Gloria Natale — a freelancer whose beauty-work in film and photography can be seen in the motion picture "Savages."

A Blonde in the White House

By HELEN HENNESSY

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Mrs. Richard M. Nixon may be the first White House blonde that most Americans remember. But there was another, back when, who charmed the country with her grace and flair for planning parties that were talked about a long time afterwards.

That was more than 100 years ago when bachelor James Buchanan took his niece with him when he went to Washington as president in 1857.

Violet-eyed Harriet Lane was 24 years old. She was already known for her beauty and charm. She had been the darling of Queen Victoria's court during her uncle's appointment as ambassador to England.

Perhaps it was the sprightly change from the gloom then settling over a nation that was moving toward a civil war. But whatever it was, Harriet had the right combination to charm her native land as thoroughly as she had enchanted England.

Orphaned at nine, she was a high-spirited tomboy when her uncle sent her off to convent schools. Then she blossomed into a poised but witty beauty. She braided her long golden tresses and wrapped them in a neat chignon on top of her head. She wore clothes that enhanced her lithe body. Her gracious entertaining earned her fame as a hostess.

History tells us that Harriet became as popular as Dolly Madison had been in her day. When Buchanan's term ended, there was praise for Harriet but little for her vacillating uncle who had been unable to act as the division between the states deepened.

Harriet married a few years later and went to live in Baltimore. But she never forgot her uncle. When she died, she left $100,000 in her will for a monument to him, which was finally erected in Washington, D.C.

Mrs. Nixon is the second blonde to set the pace of Washington society. And, unlike Harriet, she has a blonde reinforcement — her daughter Tricia.

More — in this election year the wife of a leading contender to replace Mrs. Nixon's husband is also a blonde. Although of a different shade — Mrs. George McGovern.

And then, there is blonde Joan Kennedy waiting in the wings.

Blondes are indeed back again in fashion and in the public eye. And it's odds on the First Lady for the next four years will be one.

Are blondes back in the White House to stay? Pat Nixon, Eleanor McGovern and Joan Kennedy.

Nun Finds Hard to 'Drop Out'

By JULIE FLINT
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — When a nun drops out, where can she land?

That was the question Patricia Marshall asked herself after leaving the convent of the Good Shepherd Sisters, an order dedicated to the rehabilitation of delinquent girls.

The answer, she discovered, was often no answer — in a lonely one-room apartment, a clockwork job, an emotional desert.

Today Patricia Marshall — now Mrs. Patricia Worden, wife of a management consultant — is the first administrative head of New Bearings, an official counseling organization formed last year for nuns and priests leaving the Roman Catholic church.

For Mrs. Worden, the return to lay life in 1965 after five cloistered years was "not too bad."

"I was only 26 and my parents, both Catholics were very helpful," she says. "I took it in my stride, I think. Also I had some training — a psychology degree from Cork University and personnel experience in industry."

Others, however, have found a new life more difficult.

New Bearings, run by a 10-member committee including one bishop and three university lecturers, has received some 30 appeals for help already this year. And this, Mrs. Worden stresses, constitutes only a small proportion of the total number of men and women leaving their orders.

Of these 30, most were men. "Sisters on the whole tend to be a bit more practical about things," Mrs. Worden says. "They usually have qualifications of some sort and don't find the same job problems as men."

"Nor are they so prone to loneliness. They are not like priests who have been set apart, put on a pedestal. Convent life is very busy — in fact there is often a feeling of wanting to be by oneself, to be lonely."

Reasons for quitting the church are numerous, she says. Some want to marry. Some feel hamstrung by the institutional church. Others feel it has progressed too far too quickly.

The hardest people to fit, according to Mrs. Worden, are the older ones. Half a lifetime of poverty, chastity and obedience is no ticket to success in a competitive consumer society.

Younger men can be trained for social work and teaching, or may enter industry or government. Older men are less marketable, less hopeful.

"Perhaps there isn't sufficient motivation to undertake a three-year training course when you're 55," says Mrs. Worden. "Generally they are not ambitious. They're just looking for something steady and regular — some do clerical work, even dishwashing."

Not all applicants to New Bearings are British. Many letters come from countries like Ireland, Spain and Italy.

New Bearings has no measure of its success. It has no yardstick to go by, no statistics to consider. It refers everyone somewhere, but is seldom told where — if — they land.

"But," says Mrs. Worden, who is awaiting the birth of her second child, "I am always on the end of the telephone wire if anyone needs help."

Eileen Guadagnola Takes Marriage Vows

Eileen Elizabeth Guadagnola, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Guadagnola of West Hurley, became the bride of Gordon Owen Dayton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Dayton of Wittenberg, on Saturday, Aug. 19.

The Rev. Douglas Osgood officiated at the double ring ceremony which took place in the garden of the bride's home. Peter J. Mancuso, cousin of the bride, was organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride selected an A-line gown of Nottingham lace styled with a bib of organza and a full length train. Her lace-trimmed picture hat held her three-tiered veiling and she carried a bouquet of white daisies, yellow roses and baby's breath.

Sonja Klaessing of Bearsville was honor attendant. Elyse Dayton, sister of the bridegroom, Wittenberg, was junior bridesmaid. They wore empire gowns of yellow flannel organza with crown headpieces of daisies and baby's breath and carried baskets of yellow daisies and baby's breath.

Dale Miller of Stoneham, Mass., was best man and Vincent Guadagnola, brother of the bride, West Hurley, was an usher.

A garden reception took place at the bride's home.

The bride and bridegroom are 1969 graduates of Ontario Central School. Mrs. Dayton is a senior at State University College at Brockport where she is majoring in Psychology. Her husband attended Hobart College and is a senior at State University College at Brockport, majoring in Geology.

When they return from their wedding trip to Lancaster, Pa., they will reside in Brockport.

Hulsair-Elmendorf Nuptials Told

MRS. DENNIS A. ELMENDORF
(Deborah Ann Hulsair)
(Lakeside Studio)

Miss Deborah Ann Hulsair of 76 Holiday Lane, Kingston, exchanged nuptial vows with Dennis Allen Elmendorf of 30 Warren Street, Kingston, on Sunday, Aug. 6 at 4 p.m. in Old Dutch Church. The Rev. Arthur E. Oudemool officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Hulsair of 76 Holiday Lane, Kingston, and the bridegroom is the stepson and son, respectively, of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Turck of Kingston.

Robert Palmatier, organist, accompanied Mrs. Elmor Nathan, who sang traditional wedding selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride selected a floor length gown of ivory pure silk organza, Venice lace accented the bertha collar, natural waist and long full bishop sleeves. The gown featured a full cathedral train, her bouffant English Silk illusion veil was attached to a bonnet of silk organza and crocheted lace. She carried a lace and floral-covered testament which belonged to her late grandfather, A.S. Felton.

The bride's sister, Mrs. William Lucas of Williamsport, Pa., served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were the Misses Nancy Felton, cousin of the bride; Diane Souers, Michele Perry and Margaret Elmendorf, sister of the bridegroom, all of Kingston.

The honor attendant and bridesmaids were attired alike in floor length gowns, styled with ivory chiffon bodices and candy pink skirts. They carried colonial bouquets of multi-colored daisies, miniature carnations, baby's breath and ivy.

Wayne Elmendorf Sawkill, served as best man. Ushers were Dave Mannello, Catskill; Tim Meilert, Kingston; Michael Leiching, Port Ewen; and John Cardinale, Kingston. A reception for 100 guests was held at Wiltwyck Country Club.

Mrs. Elmendorf was graduated from Kingston High School. She is employed by New York Telephone Company. Her husband, an alumnus of KHS, was recently discharged from the U.S. Army Special Forces. He is employed by the Village of Rosendale.

Upon their return from a wedding trip to Cape Cod and Martha's Vineyard, Mr. and Mrs. Elmendorf will make their home at 48 Pine Street, Kingston.

Ceremony in St. Mary's

St. Mary's Church in Kingston was the setting for the wedding of Eileen Rose O'Brien, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John David O'Brien, 1124 Oakwood Drive, Kingston, and Jack Wofford Lawson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lawson Sr. of West Columbia, S.C., on Saturday, Aug. 12.

The Rev. Joseph Connolly officiated at the double ring ceremony and celebrated the nuptial Mass. Theodore Riccobono, organist, accompanied A. Joseph Corrado who sang traditional wedding selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride selected a gown of French crystal organza fashioned with an empire bodice of re-embroidered Alencon lace and a high, scalloped, lace-edged neckline. The detachable scalloped - edged Cathedral length train was bordered with narrow banding of matching lace. Her custom-designed headpiece which featured matching fabric and lace motifs held her cathedral-length, double-tiered veil. She carried a cascade of pink cymbidium orchids, stephanotis and miniature carnations.

Miss Diane L. O'Brien of Kingston was maid of honor for her sister. Attendants were the Misses Ann Barry, Connecticut; Deborah Connolly, New York; Eileen Dempsey, Port Ewen; Mrs. Robert Hansen, West Hurley. Miss Erin Patricia O'Brien, sister of the bride, was flower girl.

For her bridal party the bride selected a color scheme of pale orchid and pale pink. The gowns were styled with smocked chiffon bodices posed over matching chiffon skirts. Sculptured Venice insertion banding with satin ribbon encircled the empire waists and trimmed the sleeve cuffs. They wore floral arrangements in their hair. The maid of honor and flower girl carried colonial nosegays of lavender and white daisies, baby's breath and pink roses. The attendants carried colonial nosegays of pink and white daisies and baby's breath.

The bride, a graduate of John A. Coleman High School, attended Mt. St. Mary College in Newburgh.

Her husband, an alumnus of Airport High School in South Carolina, attended West Point Military Academy. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lawson will attend University of South Carolina to continue their education.

When they return from their wedding trip to Bermuda, they will reside in West Columbia, S.C.

Wedding Bells Ring Out

MRS. THOMAS J. KNECHT

Miss Caroline M. Doody of 202 Fullerton Avenue, Newburgh, became the bride of Thomas Joseph Knecht of Headquarters Company, West Point, on Sunday, Aug. 6 at 3 p.m. in Post Chapel, West Point.

The Rev. Housett officiated at the double ring ceremony. The former Miss Doody is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Doody of 202 Fullerton Avenue, Newburgh. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold P. Knecht of RR 1, Elma, Iowa.

Francis J. Doody gave his daughter in marriage. She selected a silk organza and Chantilly lace gown which featured a basque waistline, sabrina neckline and long puffed sleeves. The gown was fashioned with a lace tiered full skirt and a cathedral length train. Her silk illusion chapel length veil was attached to a matching lace headpiece and she carried white and pink carnations.

The maid of honor was Miss Barbara Petrolo of 17 Bush Avenue, Newburgh. Attendants were Joyce Doody, sister of the bride, 202 Fullerton Avenue, Newburgh, junior bridesmaid; Chris Lechow, 52 Vaness Street, Newburgh; and Mrs. Kitty Boyko, 79 Y Street, Stewart Field, Newburgh.

The attendants were attired in rainbow colored gowns of pink, orchid, blue and Nile green chiffon. The empire gowns were trimmed with matching lace and embroidery. All the attendants carried balls of carnations. John R. Doody, brother of the bride, 202 Fullerton Avenue, Newburgh, was best man. Ushering were Bruce Boyko, 79 Y Street, Stewart Field, Newburgh; and Jim Mosenhal Headquarters Company, First Battalion, First Infantry, West Point.

A reception for approximately 63 guests was held at the Non-Commissioned Officers Club, Stewart Field, Newburgh.

Mrs. Knecht is a graduate of Newburgh Free Academy and Spencian Business College. She is employed at West Point. Her husband, an alumnus of Immaculate Conception High School, Elma, Iowa, is stationed at Headquarters Company First Battalion, First Infantry, West Point.

After a wedding trip to Pocono Mountains, Pennsylvania, the couple will reside at 17 Columbus Avenue, Newburgh.

St. James United Methodist Church Kingston, provided the setting for the candlelight wedding ceremony of Andrea Gale Jacobsen and Donald Christopher DuBois. The Rev. Paul Babich of Boonton, N.J., officiated at the double ring ceremony which took place Saturday, Aug. 5 at 6:30 p.m.

Robert Palmatier, organist, accompanied Caroline Robertaccio who sang "Jeg Elsker Dig" ("I Love Thee") in English and Norwegian. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold O.

MRS. DONALD C. DuBOIS
(Andrea Gale Jacobsen)
(Fitzgerald Studio)

Jacobsen of Marbletown and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald H. DuBois of Kerhonkson. The former Miss Jacobsen is the granddaughter of Daniel Olsen of Arendal, Norway and the late Selma Salvesen Olsen of Brooklyn. She is also the granddaughter of Mrs. Oswald Jacobsen of Marbletown and the late Oswald Jacobsen.

Mr. DuBois is the grandson of the late John and Anne Taylor Asma of Bolton, Lancashire, England and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald DuBois of Grahamsville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of French crystal organza fashioned with an empire bodice of re-embroidered Alencon lace and a high scalloped, lace-edged neckline. Appliques of Alencon lace motifs highlighted the deep cuffs of the long full bishop sleeves and the detachable scalloped-edged chapel length train was bordered with matching lace. Her custom designed Camelot headpiece featured matching fabric and lace motifs and held her chapel length, triple-tiered silk illusion veil.

Mrs. DuBois carried a colonial nosegay of roses, cornflowers, statice, stephanotis, daisies, asters, carnations, baby's breath, accented with white satin streamers.

Mrs. Dieter O. Thiel of Danbury, Conn., served as matron of honor for her sister. Attendants were Miss Carol Jeanne Olsen, cousin of the bride, Wyckoff, N.J. and Mrs. Theodore Jones III of Baltimore, Md.

The bride selected a color scheme of pale blue and pale yellow for her attendants. The sleeveless gowns of crystal organza were of the empire styling. Jeweled bands accented the bodices. The attendants wore fresh floral headpieces which held their silk tulle veils and carried colonial nosegay bouquets of carnations, centered with candles and accented with satin ribbons to match their gowns.

The best man was Louis V. Varone of Washingtonville. Leon Fitzgerald of Kingston and Edward Stein of Long Island served as ushers. Darin DuBois of Grahamsville served as ringbearer for his cousin.

A reception for 125 guests was held at Walnut Grove, Kingston. The bride is a graduate of Rondout Valley Central High School and a cum laude graduate of New England College, where she was a member of Phi Tau Beta Honor Society. She is employed as a teacher by Ellenville Central School District.

Her husband was graduated from Rondout Valley Central High School and Rider College. He is a member of Delta Sigma Pi Fraternity and is a law student at St. John's University Law School, Queens.

The couple honeymooned in Lancashire and London, England.

Doing the Right Thing

By ELIZABETH L. POST

Dear Mrs. Post:

You state that a widowed woman should be addressed as Mrs. John Doe rather than Mrs. Mary Doe. I was raised to believe that, too. Yet, friends and relatives I know do not WANT to be addressed by their husband's name. One even went so far as to say it was rather cruel to do it, thus reminding her of her loss. What does one do in such cases? THEY prefer being addressed by their own names.

Roberta J.

Dear Mrs. J.:

I cannot believe that any sensible woman could truly be upset each time she is addressed by her deceased husband's name. There must be other reasons that would explain her reluctance to be called "Mrs. John Jones."

However, correct as it may be, no rule is worth causing unhappiness, for whatever reason. "Mrs. John Jones" is the correct title for a widow, but if she prefers "Mrs. Mary Jones," and requests that you call her by that name, common courtesy and consideration dictate that you comply.

Dear Mrs. Post:

When getting on a crowded bus, should a thirteen-year-old girl offer the one empty seat to her forty-five-year-old father?

Jennifer

Dear Jennifer:

A thirteen-year-old girl is still technically a child (although to be sure, some do not look it) and should treat her elders respectfully whether they are men or women. "Age before beauty" is applicable, and the girl should at least offer the seat to her father. Since a forty-five-year-old man probably does not feel exactly decrepit, he will undoubtedly refuse the seat, but he should be given the chance to do so.

Dear Mrs. Post:

Please help me settle a disagreement. How do the parents of the bride and groom sit? For twenty years I have serviced weddings and this was the first time that anyone doubted my word that the father sits on the aisle.

Jean

Dear Jean:

You are right — and I trust it will be another twenty years before anyone questions it. The fathers of the bride and groom sit on the aisle. The groom's mother is escorted to the first pew by an usher. Her husband follows, and steps into the pew after her. The groom's mother is seated by the head usher, and the father joins her in the pew after escorting his daughter to the altar and giving her away. In neither case does the man cross in front of his wife — he remains in the aisle seat.

Quotable Quotes

"When I was a girl I was very fond of horses, and I told everyone I was named after the horse and not after Abraham Lincoln's mother."

— Nancy Hanks, chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, receiving a Currier and Ives print of the world's champion trotting horse of 1892, "Nancy Hanks."

"Far too often the only avenues by which a woman can express herself are through publications controlled by men. Consequently, much of what women have had to offer has been labeled trivial or ignored as typically feminine, a term that carries all those delightful connotations of sugary, flowery, naive or simply poorly written." — Becky Backus, one of a group of college women who have begun publication of a literary magazine created and edited by women.

Consumer Question Box

By MARGARET DANA

Q. This weekend I found what I believe to be crushed glass in a can of red salmon. What do you suggest I do about it?

A. The first thing to do is to test to make sure the material you found actually is glass. From time to time both industry and the FDA gets reports from consumers that they have found glass in canned seafood. Usually, however, this proves to be "struvite," which is a crystalline magnesium ammonium phosphate, in chemical terms, and it occasionally forms in canned seafood from perfectly normal factors. While not desirable, it is not a hazard. Here's a simple test to find out if you have glass or struvite. Put the material in some warm vinegar for a while. Struvite crystals will dissolve. Glass won't. If it proves to be glass, write the Food Compliance Division of the Food and Drug Administration, Washington, D.C.

Q. Could you please tell us something about "proten beef"? There is a market here which has it. It is put out by Swift and Co. The meat is very good and tender, but we are wondering if there is any connection between this and that cattle food additive they say is so harmful.

A. The "proten" process injects papain juice into cattle just before slaughtering. Papain juice is a long-known and used tenderizer for meat. In some countries the leaves of the papaya fruit are wrapped around tough chickens overnight before cooking. It appears to tenderize beef efficiently. It is not related to the additives put in cattle feed.

Q. In July of last year we ordered some suits from a Hong Kong tailoring company. We paid for them by check which was cashed but have never received the merchandise or any word concerning it. We have written them two letters and still no answer. We also wrote the Indian Chamber of Commerce and received a note saying they would investigate. Still no results. Can you give us any suggestions as to what we might do? Even if we can't recover any of our $150 we would like to know how to warn others.

A. This is a long-standing problem which many trusting consumers have encountered. There are without doubt reliable business firms in Hong Kong, but this problem of tailored suits made in Hong Kong but never delivered crops up often. I have seen bulletins from the Better Business Bureau for years warning buyers to make sure of the reputation and bona fides of any company offering bargains in tailored clothing from Hong Kong. If the seller is based in a city near you, and is permanent, he should be able to offer proof of his dependability. Otherwise, if you have only a salesman as contact, and no means offered you to check on him and his company, you should be wary. Getting your money back from one of the disappearing sales representatives is usually impossible. So this will be a warning to others not to be tricked as you were.

Q. I bought a can of ham which does not have to be refrigerated and took it to a camp at 7,000 feet altitude. When the can bulged I took it back to return it, and it no longer bulges. Is it safe?

A. There is no way to tell if the food in the can is still safe except by a laboratory analysis. Defective canning or seal of the can could make the meat vulnerable to pressure changes. Also you should be very sure temperature was not involved. Generally speaking canned hams should be refrigerated to avoid temperature changes and higher temperatures which affect quality.

Q. I have been told that the only practical way to settle a complaint against a service man is to take it to the small claims court. But this seems to me an expensive and time-consuming way to go about it. Can you suggest any simpler method by which consumers could get satisfaction when there are real complaints against TV services, etc?

A. The best solution I have heard about is the arbitration committee set up by the attorney general of the state of Washington, to investigate consumer complaints concerning appliance and TV repairs. This is now operating in Pierce County, Washington. It is sponsored jointly by the attorney general, and the Appliance and TV Dealers' Association. They will study complaints and try to bring about a satisfactory settlement between customers and dealers.

The attorney general, Slade Gorton, has said he is enthusiastic about this means of settling complaints, for he feels his office of Consumer Protection gets best results for consumers through cooperation with responsible businessmen.

Other states and areas ought to copy this progressive action in the state of Washington. Consumers could get it going by promoting it in their own states, or counties.

Q. I am allergic to durable press and I would like to make my objections to durable press clothes, sheets, pillowcases, etc. known to the industry. Our choice in the stores is being narrowed down so much that it is almost impossible to find the plain cottons, plain acrylics, etc. I would also like to know if there is any medicine which counteracts these allergies.

A. Allergy to durable press is usually caused by sensitivity to the chemicals used to "set" the press. From time to time I see reports of new chemicals or new methods the industry is trying out to avoid the effects some people experience in contact with durable press. Allergy to fibers is a specific allergy caused by a specific material in the fiber. You should consult an allergy expert on this for treatment.

Many Lives of the Mature Woman

(First in a Series)

By ALISON GODDARD

New York (MW)—Although frequently in conflict with her adolescent children, the mature woman has much in common with them. She too is seeking a new identity. She knows her children will soon be leaving home. She's aware her child-bearing days are over. She must have a new role in life to replace the familiar one of "mother."

While trying to cope with her identity problems, the mature woman is caught in the upheavals of her adolescent children. They keep shifting back and forth between the world of children and the world of adults — pushing toward independence; away from their parents. "These young people," says Walter Lehmann, M.D., Connecticut specialist in adolescent medicine, "are as dynamic, idealistic and impressionable as they'll ever be. And they need all the support they can get."

Yet as most parents know, adolescents reject adult advice. They resent all restrictions—physical and psychological. "They think they know everything," Dr. Lehmann comments, "but underneath they're fearful of failure." Adolescents turn away from their parents and toward their "peer group," says Canadian sociologist James J. Teevan, "because they know their contemporaries will more readily accept adult behavior from them." Despite this, Dr. Lehmann points out, "youngsters still want their parents to be aware of their need for acceptance, independence and success, and also to understand their anxiety."

1. HER LIFE AS A PARENT

Today's mature woman—trying to come to grips with her children's conflicting needs for independence and support and her own diminishing motherhood — faces still another challenge. She frequently finds that her adolescent children don't share her views on what life is all about.

Her generation grew up believing that people should live in small family units—most often in cities; work hard and competitively to amass as much material wealth as possible and always defer to authority. Now she finds the younger generation frequently believes the opposite. They hold that people should live cooperatively in large community groups; that traditional concepts of hard work and authority no longer make sense.

They're more interested in preserving the environment than in promoting economic growth. They want to live off the land — to eat, dress and behave "as naturally as possible."

Perhaps most disturbing is their attitude toward sexual freedom. Many young people claim that marriage is no longer necessary to have "meaningful" relationships. "It's alarming to see them moving away from patterns of courtship and marriage," says family life educator Eda LeShan, "which we were taught were the basis for fulfillment and social stability."

Young people, notes Dr. Gislaine D. Godenne, director of adolescent psychiatry at Johns Hopkins Hospital, are aware of the high incidence of separation and divorce today. "They're shying away from early lifetime commitments," Dr. Godenne asserts. "They want to make sure of their mutual love and compatibility before starting a home and having children." Traditional attitudes toward marriage are being "scrapped," report

Helen and Ralph Branson who teach sociology at the University of Idaho. But they maintain the institution itself is hardly "obsolete."

These new ways of thinking and acting are difficult for the mature woman to accept. She wants to retain her values, and at the same time give her adolescent children guidance and support. "It's like walking a tightrope," declares Eda LeShan.

When parents bend over backward "not to interfere," psychiatrists report, their children often accuse them of being "indifferent." Parents, states Sadie Hofstein, a New York child development consultant, "should in no way become passive or silent, afraid to state their opinions or plead their cause." And Stanford University psychologist Richard Blum observes, "you have to invest ten pounds of energy for every single pound of healthy, flourishing child."

The mature woman today knows that she must listen to — and not lecture — her youngsters. She must create a climate in which they can ask her advice and opinions without weakening their own independence. She learns to be sensitive as to when they need "mothering" and when they don't. She can acknowledge, without having to accept their values and their lifestyles. "The challenge," Mrs. Hofstein points out, "is to see our children as young people — not of our generation — but moving toward their own."

After a Fashion

Ida Lupino—Impeccable Dresser

By Marian Christy

BEVERLY HILLS — Today there's no phony-baloney movie star mask to cloud the no-nonsense image of Ida Lupino. She's in a let-the-chips-fall-where-they-may mood.

Still-lovely Ida, wearing impeccable blue trousers and a frilly print shirt, is whizzing around her blue-white hacienda juggling the three-pronged situation with cool efficiency.

One — she plunks a tankard of fresh orange juice in front of each guest. Two — she warns husband Howard Duff, a bare-to-the-waist hunk of manhood, that he's playing suicide with his eyes by reading in a bad light. Three — she telephones the local pet shop to say: "Darling, my doggies are going crazy. Send a boy over with that nice spray-on foam, eh? And listen, dear, put in a couple of cans of that liver food. The silly things love the stuff."

Okay, she says. Shoot. She's ready for the third degree.

Ida speaks staccato dialogue. Beverly Hills? Hates the place. "It's too frantic, frenetic. The hustling and pushing make me sick." The house? Inhibiting. Drives her nuts. Nothing is the way she really wants it. Yuk, too many things around. And all these trappings — the beautiful furniture, the rugs, the accessories?

"God," she says, rolling her baby-blue eyes toward the ceiling, "you don't own them, honey. They own you." The interrogation has turned into a confession. She's at the crossroads of life. What she needs now is a large dose of peace, quiet, isolation. Boy, first chance she gets she's going to ditch this house and move to Vancouver, B.C. There's a beautiful seaside fairland out there and she wants to touch bases with it.

"I crave to be near the sea. The ocean restores sagging spirits. The sea's movement is constant. I'm hungry for soothing blessing of nature. Listen, honey, I get rattled and the ocean is my tranquilizer."

There is a romantic side about seaside living.

When Howard and Ida were first married they couldn't break the leases of houses they inhabited separately on Malibu Beach. So they lived apart by day but, at sundown, Howard went to Ida's place and did not leave until sunup. There was a mild scandal. "The neighbors saw Howard sneaking in and out and they thought we had a new design on living."

When they finally joined forces under one roof, there were major personality adjustments to make. Obviously, there's still room for improvement.

Howard likes parties and: "Dearie, I go into immediate shock at the idea of standing around making small talk with people I'll never see again."

Howard likes a place for everything and everything in its place. "I'm mentally untidy," says Ida. "I hate routine." On the other hand, Howard despises keeping bills in order and lets the mail pile up to delay the writing of checks. There are the usual dire letters of warning. "We've practically gotten a divorce over that," she says. "He hides unpleasant mail beneath the mattress."

Ida Lupino has come to the conclusion, at age 54 and after 21 years of marriage to Howard that the most superlative man-woman unions are those where the partners have individual addresses and get together only under the sweetest circumstance. She speaks from experience. Ida had two other husbands before Duff — Louis Hayward and Collier Young. "I'd do it all again," she says, "but differently."

The Duffs have a 20-year-old daughter and, presumably from firsthand experience, Ida expresses depression-filled thoughts about the future of youth.

"If the young choose to live together to find out what it's like before settling into utter misery on a permanent basis, it's really quite all right," Ida says. "She has told her daughter she is free to live her life as she pleases."

Howard, who has stayed in the background, has now put on a shirt, strayed into the room and subtly moved into the conversation. Ida welcomes him with: "At least that man isn't a hypocrite. He says what he thinks." Howard immediately proves the point.

"When I first met her, I didn't like her at all. She came on like a big movie star. She was defensive and terribly self-reliant. I found myself being very brash with her. But then things got to the point where we were practically living together. At that time people were getting married. So we did, too. I found out she was one hell of a broad."

Howard is saying that he never played Mr. Romance to Ida. He never sent her flowers or bribed her with jewelry or furs. "I never did anything standout to be engraved on the chronicles of time," he says and Ida looks mischievously at him, shaking her head up and down.

Ida interpolates that she's got a few things to say about Howard's being just a little too cool and she's not about to take Duff's guff, ha-ha. "Howard isn't demonstrative with his affection," she says. "It has been very difficult for me to understand his physical reserve. I'm Italian-Irish. My whole being burns with fire and electricity. He doesn't show his feelings outwardly — he has to be coaxed."

Howard, a man of innate British cool, has to get his oars in again. This conversation is getting too one-sided. Things are slightly out of hand. But better to change the subject than engage in a friendly verbal brawl.

Her Cousin Not Distant Enough!

DEAR ABBY: Last summer I received a surprise visit from a shirt tail cousin whom I had not seen in 25 years. She lives in a nearby state. She just rang my bell and spent hours discussing her domestic problems, a discussion I disliked intensely. I listened and offered several cluck cluck sounds and a series of, "O, dear me's."

I had never met her husband, nor did I know she had a grown daughter, and I knew nothing about her pending divorce, etc., nor was I at all interested.

Last week I received an invitation to her daughter's wedding, plus a map with instructions on how to get to the country club for the reception.

I did not respond at once, so the daughter called me long distance to ask if I was coming. I told her I was sorry but it was impossible and I wished her every happiness.

She described some of the lovely wedding gifts she had received (I had sent nothing), and added that she and her husband were passing thru my town on their wedding trip.

The girl apparently wanted both a wedding gift and an invitation to stop here. I am not interested in either. I do not want to do the wrong thing, but this is embarrassing for me. What should I do?

COUSIN (NOT FAR ENOUGH REMOVED)

DEAR COUSIN: Since you say you have no interest in doing anything, and so far have done nothing, you've done exactly the right thing. Nothing.

DEAR ABBY: Am I a witch? I work in a large hospital and it's getting so I hate to go to work. It's not that I don't enjoy the work, Abby, but whenever a patient dies, or a coworker has an accident, I can tell it almost 24 hours ahead of time. Of course, I tell no one when I get these feelings, but when I hear what has happened, I am never surprised because I knew it would happen beforehand.

I knew that a coworker was going to have a serious accident the day before it happened, and yet I didn't dare warn him. It scares me so.

I have been this way since I was eight years old. That is why I never made any close friendships. I felt I was some kind of witch.

I have been to church and prayed, I even had my eyes blessed with holy water. It didn't help.

I don't tell people about this strange power I have to foresee the future because they would think I was lying or crazy. But I have a feeling that I can tell you, and you will understand. Do you?

FEELS BETTER

DEAR FEELS: Yes, I do.

DEAR ABBY: I have been to two wedding this last month, both in churches with receptions afterward. Many guests brought wedding gifts, which were in both cases piled up on a table, but not opened.

Is this something new? In the past, at all the weddings I attended, all the gifts were opened by the bride and groom in the presence of the guests. Then they were displayed for everyone to see.

H.W.J.

DEAR H.W.J.: It depends upon the number of gifts there are to open. If there are so many that the bride and groom would be required to spend most of their time at the reception unwrapping, exclaiming and thanking, I think they should be excused from the ordeal.

CANTONESE CASSEROLE

Honorable Family Dinner

Treat your family like company. Serve elegant but easy Cantonese Casserole tonight. It's a main dish you can quickly prepare in the morning and refrigerate until time to pop it in the oven. Keep in mind that it is a dandy make-ahead for when you're away at dinnertime and want to treat dad and the kids to an extra special, no-fuss supper.

Fluffy rice pilaf, frozen in the stay-perfect cooking pouch, is mated with popular ground beef, crisp celery and tender sliced mushrooms; then blended with always handy condensed soups and soy sauce.

Accented by a fruit cup of pineapple tidbits, mandarin oranges, cherries and a sprinkle of coconut, an everyday dinner easily turns into a special occasion. For dessert, chuckle over proverbial fortune cookies.

Cantonese Casserole

One 12-oz. package rice pilaf (rice with mushrooms and onions) frozen in the stay-perfect pouch.

One pound ground beef
One cup diced celery
One-half cup diced onion
One 10 and one-half-oz. can condensed cream of mushroom soup
One 10 and one-half-oz. can condensed chicken with rice soup

One two and one-half-oz. jar sliced mushrooms, drained
One-fourth cup soy sauce
Two tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
Chow mein noodles

Cook rice according to package directions only until thawed. In large skillet, brown meat with onion and celery; drain off excess fat. In two and one-half quart casserole, combine all ingredients. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven for 35 to 40 minutes. Serve with chow mein noodles. Serves six.

Rice Pudding: Everyone Loves It!

Rice pudding is one dessert that practically everyone enjoys. Its rich blend of rice, eggs and milk makes it a favorite for young and old alike.

President Ulysses S. Grant's fondness for rice pudding, though, was just short of phenomenal. During his tenure in the White House it was served regularly at family and official dinners.

With its piquant simplicity, rice pudding was a perfect foil for the elaborate 25-course dinners served at the White House during the mid-nineteenth century.

At President Grant's insistence, the White House steward was called upon to devise many elegant versions of this traditional pudding — for formal dinners in particular.

The recipe featured here is perhaps one of the richest and most sophisticated of all rice puddings . . . a distinctly uncommon version, flavored with fresh lemon peel and vanilla . . . topped with a delicate, translucent lemon sauce.

President Grant's Rice Pudding

One tablespoon butter or margarine
Three cups hot cooked rice
Four eggs, separated
Two cups half-and-half (cream and milk)
Two cups milk
One-half cup sugar
One tablespoon grated lemon peel

One teaspoon vanilla
One-eighth teaspoon salt
Whipped cream, (optional)
Lemon Sauce*

Stir butter into rice. Beat yolks and add cream, milk, sugar, lemon peel, vanilla, and salt. Stir into rice, then fold in egg whites which have been beaten until stiff but not dry. Pour into a buttered 11 x 7-inch baking dish. Set in pan of hot water. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serve warm with whipped cream and Lemon Sauce*. Makes eight servings.

PRESIDENT GRANT'S fondness for rice pudding has become a White House culinary legend. This very sophisticated baked version is rich with cream and eggs and served with a delicate translucent lemon sauce.

Lemon Sauce

One-half cup sugar
One tablespoon cornstarch
One-eighth teaspoon salt
One cup boiling water
One tablespoon butter or margarine
One tablespoon grated lemon peel
Three tablespoons lemon juice
Combine sugar, cornstarch, and salt. Stir in water gradually. Cook, stirring constantly, about five minutes. Blend in remaining ingredients. Makes one cup sauce.

Using sugar and omitting whipped cream, each serving provides: 348 calories.

Using sugar substitute to equal sugar and omitting whipped cream, each serving provides: 253 calories.

Crab Gumbo

One cup chopped green peppers
One cup chopped onions
One package (10 oz.) frozen cut okra, thawed
Two tablespoons bacon drippings, butter or margarine
One can (28 oz.) tomatoes, cut up
Two teaspoons salt
One-half teaspoon crushed red peppers
One quart chicken broth
One pound crab meat, flaked

Three cups hot cooked rice.
Cook green peppers, onions, and okra in bacon drippings but do not brown. Add tomatoes, salt, and red peppers. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat, cover, and simmer 15 minutes. Remove cover; add broth and continue cooking 15 minutes. Remove shell and cartilage from crab meat. Add crab meat to above ingredients and cook 10 minutes longer. Serve in individual soup plates with a mound of fluffy rice. Makes eight servings.

Each serving provides: 188 calories
Two meat exchanges
One bread exchange
One fat exchange

Pilau

One-half cup slivered almonds
One-fourth cup chopped pistachio nuts
Two tablespoons butter or margarine
Three cups cooked rice (cooked in chicken broth)
Two teaspoons powdered mace

Saute almonds and pistachio nuts in butter about three minutes, stirring frequently. Add rice and mace. Heat thoroughly, tossing lightly to prevent sticking. Makes six servings.

Each serving provides: 201 calories
One bread exchange
Two and one-half fat exchanges

For an elegant luncheon or supper dish you can't beat Crab Gumbo served over mounds of fluffy rice . . . a favorite supper dish of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

A FORUM ABOUT MATURE WOMEN

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

I'm the eldest of three sisters. The two younger ones left home at an early age and I cared for both my parents. My father died 25 years ago and my mother has depended on me since then. When I was 41, I met and married a divorced man of 51. While I was married, mother lived by herself, but finally got to the age where she couldn't be left alone. She divided her time among each of us sisters, but eventually reached the point where she had to stay in one place. She decided she wanted to stay with me. My sisters said she should be put in a nursing home. I opposed the idea. (I had then been married 11 1/2 years.) When I approached my husband about my mother living with us, he was very much against the idea. He gave me an ultimatum. He said I should either put her in a home and stay married to him or get divorced and live with her. I told him he was extremely selfish. He got a Mexican divorce. We've been apart for two years now. He lives in another state, is collecting social security and has a small job. I hear from him from time to time and know he's just waiting for a funeral to get me back. (Mother is 86 now and probably will still be around for a while.) I do miss him and wonder if I should consider going back. I'm so unhappy. Church work doesn't interest me anymore. Seeing my old friends doesn't help. What would you suggest?

G.H.

Your devotion to your mother has been beyond reproach. You've devoted the major part of your life to caring for her. But you're a person with a life of your own. To continue to deny that life is to be unfair to yourself and your ex-husband, who apparently still loves you. Perhaps he wasn't the selfish one after all. Perhaps he felt that by your decision you were choosing to live half a life instead of a whole one. Your mother has three daughters. Decisions concerning her should involve all of you equally. So why not get together with your sisters again. You'll be able to work out what is best under the circumstances for everybody concerned.

Dear Margaret Brookfield: When I was in my adolescence, I had a very rough time with my periods.

Now I'm 49, in my menopause, and having a tough time again. I have all sorts of symptoms. Is there any connection between those two times of a woman's life?

R.L.

Dear R.L.:

Dr. Charles W. Wahl, of the University of California School of Medicine, has pointed out that a patient with menstrual difficulties may also suffer a stormy menopause later on. In your own case, why not see your doctor and discuss your symptoms with him. You might also raise the question then about estrogen therapy which many physicians prescribe for patients with menopause difficulties. This hormone treatment — which replaces the estrogen a woman this age loses — often has a calming effect on stormy symptoms.

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

I'd like to know if pregnancy is possible after the completion of the menopause. That is, can ovulation still take place after menstruation is no longer evident? Although I'm 52 and haven't had a period in more than four years, I feel very unsure about the whole thing. I'd appreciate any advice you might have.

Dear J.C.:

This question comes up time and time again with mature women, who just don't know whether or not they are safe from pregnancy at their age. Doctors tell us, however, that a woman who has not had a period for 12 months is in the menopause and past her child-bearing years. (Since her ovaries are no longer fully operational then, she stops ovulating and is no longer able to conceive.) At the same time, her body's supply of female hormones — which the ovary had produced — may be diminishing and may therefore need to be replaced. That determination must, of course, be made by her doctor. (If he prescribes estrogen replacement, this will help restore her hormonal balance but won't bring back her earlier fertility.) Since you yourself haven't had a period for four years, it would be safe to assume now that pregnancy is no longer a possibility for you. But why not see your doctor in any case and have a complete general checkup?

Before You Buy Learn About Hot Dogs!

By MARGARET DANA

A lot of people are worried these days about the criticisms they have heard or read about the safety or the nutrition in our good old hot dogs. One letter to me recently asked: "Please tell me if the water and protein content in all meat and all beef hot dogs differ. A recent LIFE magazine article cites the high water content of 'all meat' hotdogs — 57 per cent — and the low protein content — 13 per cent. We always buy the 'all beef' type when we buy hot dogs. Are they different? Better? Or Worse?" Starting with the inquiry about the water content of hot dogs, they average about 55 per cent water. If that sounds shockingly high, let me remind you that it is considerably lower than the natural water content of most meat. Beef chunk for instance contains 60 per cent water, flank steak 72 per cent, lean hamburger 68 per cent, and so on. Water is essential to the process of making the mixture which becomes a hot dog.

There is however a strict limitation on fat in hot dogs. The USDA has set 30 per cent fat as the maximum, as in hamburger. As for comparative protein contents, while it will vary from brand to brand and according to the type, the average protein in one hot dog is about 12 1/2 per cent, above quoted. A single hot dog also contains a significant amount of B Vitamins and some iron. Calories for one cooked hot dog come to 145 and 155.

But it is important to understand there are three quite different types of hot dogs made from varying ingredients. The "all meat" frank, which appears to be the most popular, is required to be made of all skeletal meats — meaning no kidney or other organs can be used.

It is usually a mixture of beef and pork. Seasonings such as sugar, coriander, white pepper, nutmeg, mustard, garlic, or any combination of some of these will be added. But no fillers such as dry milk or soy flour can be added.

If the label does not say "all meat," but simply "frankfurter" or "wiener" or "hot dog," it is made of a combination of meats and fillers with seasonings. When the label says "all beef," no other kind of meat or any kind of filler is permitted. And when the package says "Kosher," that means it is all beef and has been produced correctly under Rabbinical supervision. Regardless however of the type, all hot dogs must carry on their labels a list of ingredients, in descending order of the amounts used.

So what this comes down to is that the primary difference between the "all meat" and the "all beef" frank are probably ones of flavor, texture, and price. The actual nutrition will not vary greatly. You will not get one-third of your day's nutrition from one hot dog. But you won't get it from one serving of chicken, nor one slice of watermelon or a glass of milk, taken alone. A sound nutritious diet rests on choosing a wide variety of foods which supply many different factors the human body needs. No one product — including bread or cereal — should be expected to do it all.

Hot dogs, after the mixture of meats and seasonings are ground and blended, are forced into the long casings, either of plastic or natural covers, and then placed in huge ovens with hardwood smoke to season. Some of the cooking may be also done there, or it may be done by steam or hot water. The timing and smoking are very precise formulas. I am told, as well as the exact mixture of ingredients.

After the required smoking and cooking, they are cooled rapidly, the plastic casings removed from the ones to be "skinless," and they are packaged, labeled and refrigerated. When you buy some and get them home, they should still be refrigerated if not used at once. In their original wrappings they should keep well for around two weeks if your refrigerator temperature is 40 degrees or lower. Nobody recommends freezing franks, simply because freezing can alter the flavor and quality of smoked meats. But it can be done — keeping them frozen no more than one or two months.

Two points about hot dog quality have been much discussed lately, the use of nitrates in them, and the possibility of inadequate sanitary care in too many processing plants. In regard to nitrates, I can find no evidence proving them harmful in the amounts FDA allows, and I do find impressive reports showing that nitrates inhibit the growth of botulism bacteria. But the FDA believes many food processing plants will have to lift the level of their sanitary conditions, and the USDA is increasing inspection of meat-processing plants particularly. Tougher and more frequent inspection is something consumers have a right to count on.

KINGSTON organized campaign in the respective towns. The towns of Rosendale, Hurley and Saugerties have played vital roles in previous United Way Campaigns and even greater contributions are expected in the 1973 Campaign," he said.

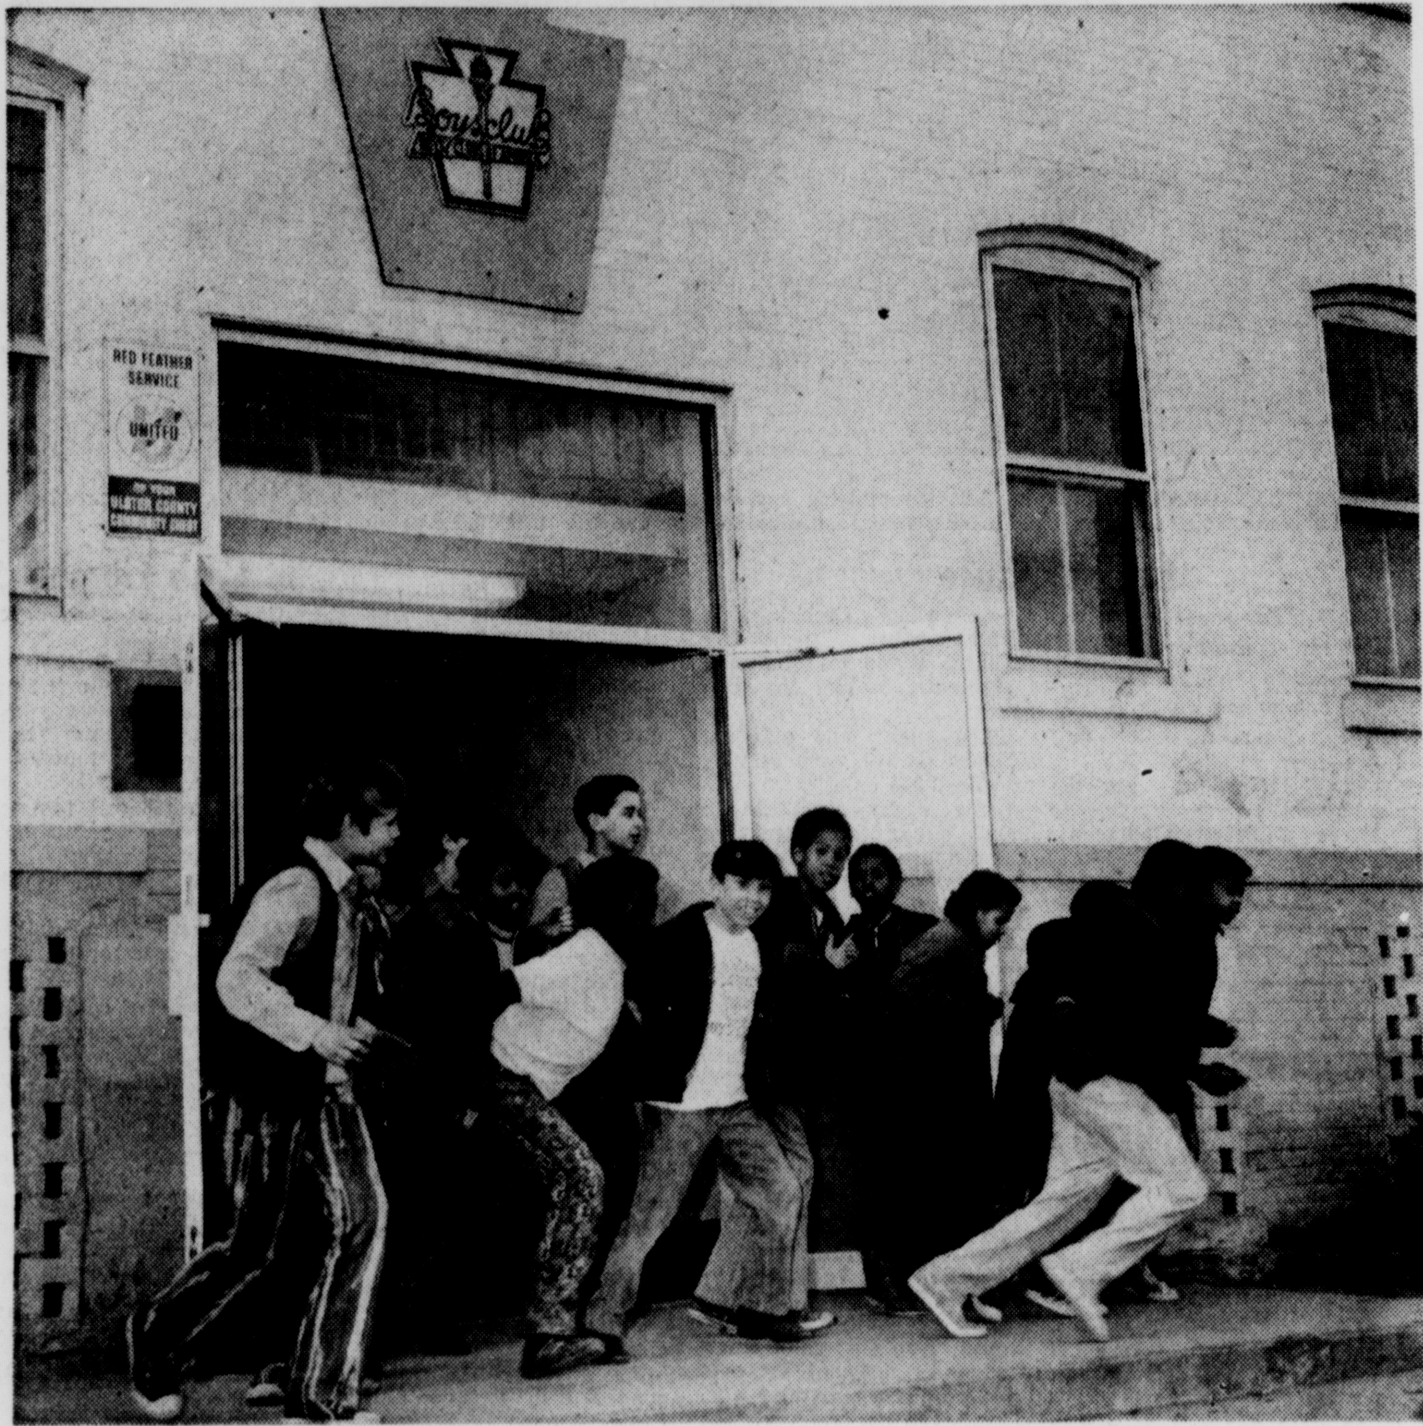

Mrs. DeStefano has served as village trustee for Rosendale since March 1972. She is a past president of the Rosendale PTA and served as the 1970 Heart Fund village captain. Mrs. DeStefano is also vice-president of the Greenhorn Bowling League, member of the Rondout Valley Community Cabinet, member of the Ulster County Democratic Executive Committee, Rosendale Democratic Club and Chairman of the Ulster County Democratic Auction. She is a graduate of St. Agnes Academy, College Point. Mrs. DeStefano resides on South Street, Rosendale, with her husband Tony, and three children, Michael, Michelle, and Tony.

Murray is vice president of Bankers Trust, Hudson Valley. He is a graduate of the Commercial Bank Management Program at the Columbia University Graduate School of Business and has completed two years of schooling with the New York State Executive Development School. He is currently a member of the Rondout Lodge 343 F & AM, Kingston Area Chamber of Commerce, Kingston Kiwanis Club and YMCA. Murray resides in Rolling Meadows with his wife, the former Joan L. Gill. The Murray's have four children, Mrs. Karol Cashdollar, Jennifer, Craig and Kyle.

Decker is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy and has received a masters degree in mechanical engineering. He retired from the Navy in 1961 as a commander and in 1967 joined IBM. Decker is a member of the Town of Saugerties Planning Board, budget officer for the Town of Saugerties, committeeman for the ninth election district, member of the Board of directors of the IBM Credit Union, member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, Society of Automotive Engineers, Retired Officers Association, and the Newcomen Society in North America. Decker lives on Hauptmann Road, Saugerties.

Brocco said that the United Way Campaign for Ulster County will begin Sept. 13. $404,000 must be raised this year to meet the minimum operational requirements for the 15 member agencies of the United Way. Over 800 volunteers are expected to participate in the 1973 campaign.

Boys' Club... 'Very Unique Organization'

HAPPY BOYS HEAD FOR OUTDOOR ACTIVITY

KINGSTON The Kingston Boys' Club is a very unique organization. A member agency of the United Way, it satisfies an age-old desire of boys to have a club of their own. Its members therefore have a real sense of belonging, and their use of the club is not interfered with by other groups or individuals.

A boys' club, to be different, must provide in its program a contribution to a boy which is significant but distinguishable from what he gets elsewhere, in school, at home, in church, in other private agencies, or in public recreation.

Although individual boys' clubs vary in program, quality, and services, depending upon their resources, there are certain characteristics which make the Kingston Boys' Club a unique organization. It has full-time professional leadership, supplemented by part time workers and volunteers. No proof of good character or pledge is required. Its membership is not limited to boys of good character only. It also helps and guides boys who may be in danger of acquiring, or have had, bad habits and wrong attitudes and who behave improperly.

Any boy can afford to belong. Membership dues are kept low so that the poorest as well as the least interested boy can afford to belong on an equal basis with all other boys. It is for all boys of all races, religions and color. It is building centered and activities are carried on in the warm friendly atmosphere of buildings especially designed for the conduct of boys' club programs. Extension activities are also directed from such buildings.

It is nonsectarian in organization, management and leadership and has an open door policy to all of its members at any time during its hours of operation. It has a varied and diversified program planned to meet the needs and interests of boys and utilizes three basic approaches: Individual services, organized small group activities and drop-in and large group activities. It is guidance-oriented emphasizing the values inherent in the relationship between the boy and his peers and the boy and his adult leaders.

degree than other youth serving organizations.

"Chuck" Holochuck, executive director states "We are meeting and trying to meet the needs of many low-income families in our community by providing hundreds of boys with a facility that offers them the opportunity to pursue educational, recreational and cultural activities on a day-to-day basis."

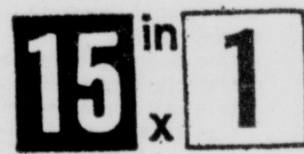

On the surface, serving boys from low income families would seem to be a specialized task involving a small segment of Kingston's population. This is not the case. Kingston as a whole is a low income area especially when compared to the surrounding communities.

Kingston schools, grades K-9 have approximately 4,000 boys. Half of these boys may come from families below the median income level. This is probably a conservative figure because low income families tend to have more children. Over half of these boys could come from families below the $4,000 income level.

Sixty-five per cent of the yearly operating budget of the boys' club comes from the many contributors who make their donations through the United Way of Ulster County. Activities stressing informal guidance include arts and crafts, sports, special interest groups and a three week overnight camping program. . . . Specifically, within these programs are library activities, woodworking, field trips, learn to swim class, boxing class, cooking class, junior basketball league, senior basketball, softball, wiffleball, trampoline, tumbling, wrestling, group games, Game room tournaments, parties, clubs, carnivals, movies and special events.

The Boys' Club was born in Kingston in 1946 and has since served countless thousands of boys in the Kingston area. It is located at 139 Greenkill Avenue. All boys between the ages of 8 and 16 are invited to join.

Thanks to You
It's Working

The distinctiveness of a boys' club does not rest on any one of the characteristics mentioned but rather on a total combination of them.

Although boys' clubs are interested in serving all boys, one other thing which makes them particularly distinctive is that they have a responsibility for serving the poor boy as well as the disadvantaged boy (one can be disadvantaged in other ways than economic). In too many instances agencies find it easier and more convenient to work with the middle class child, the easier-to-work-with, conforming boy and the joiner. Boys' clubs often attempt also to reach the hard-to-serve and the hard-to-reach to a greater

Hawaiians Planning Floating City

HONOLULU (AP) — Fearing their idyllic islands will be swamped by mass migrations of people from the continental United States, Hawaiians are planning a modern, but away-from-it all city.

The city will embrace the high-density, three-dimensional approach with apartments clustered and rising high into the sky, each with a view.

Conveyor belts, elevators and a monorail system will move people. There will be no cars. Everything will be within 30 minutes' walking distance.

There will be no pollution, no noise. And each family will have a continuously changing view of the coastline of Hawaii's islands.

For the city will rise out of the sea. It will float. A 1-to-20 model of a city is floating now—in Kaneohe Bay on Oahu's north shore. It was built of sheet metal, welded and bolted together by professors and students working on weekends. It was financed by an $85,000 federal grant.

"It's a community effort," said Joe E. Hanson, manager of the University of Hawaii's Floating City Project. He ticks off the local contributions: firms provided forklifts and trucks; the Navy supplied a tug to tow it; Honolulu Community College donated student welders, and volunteer students and military divers gave their time.

The driving force behind the floating city idea is John Craven, a University of Hawaii professor of ocean engineering and the state's marine affairs coordinator.

He says: "All I want to do is return the land to environmental use and put the high-density structures at sea. It is the hardest battle to make people understand that Hawaii is a very desirable place to live, and stopping people from coming here is just kind of a vain hope."

And, to make room for the increasing population Craven says will be double the present 770,000 persons by the year 2,000, work on the city continues.

After completing tests on the 150-ton model, the next objective will be a two-mile-long city for a marine exhibit in 1978, marking the bicentennial of the discovery of the Hawaiian islands by Capt. James Cook.

If all goes well, the exhibition city will float a few miles off Waikiki, permanently accommodating 2,000 persons, having enough hotel rooms for 8,000 overnight guests and handling 40,000 daily visitors.

The design of the city grew out of a series of meetings among ocean engineering students, Craven and Japanese architect Kiyonori Kikutake.

The key principle is that long pylons—huge bottles, really—extending deep into the ocean will provide stability enough so that you won't have to worry about getting seasick on the city, Craven said.

Three of the giant, 350-foot-tall bottles bolted together and supporting a platform will form a module, on which hotels and apartments will be built. Ten of the modules fitted together will form the inner ring of the city. Craven hopes an additional 10 will be hooked on to the outside for the exhibition city.

All but 40 feet of the bottles will be under water. They will be weighed down with ballast or other materials to give the city stability. There will be underwater hotels and restaurants in some.

In future floating cities, they will be the sites of factories, sewage treatment plants and other facilities which do not require sunlight.

Visitors would step off a ferry and take an elevator up a pylon to get to the inner core of the city, a structure that will rise some 13 stories above sea level.

A system of pulleys moored to the ocean floor will rotate the city and move it up and down a five-mile tract. It would be possible to watch the sun sink in the west and rise in the east from the same hotel room.

HAPPY SMILES—Happy smiles are the style at the summertime curb-to-curb pedestrian malls which enliven Toronto's downtown core. Joining the fun in this typical street scene is a London-type Pearly King along with his fruit peddler's cart. With vehicles banned, thousands come to dine, drink beer, window shop and yes, girl watch in the sun. Similar malls are planned throughout the summer until September, one of them in Toronto's Chinatown. (Toronto Tourist Bureau photo)

LAKE GEORGE TIME TOWN—A looming 17-foot cavewoman oversees the East's newest family attraction, Time Town. Coolidge Hill Road in Lake George, just south of Bolton Landing, Time Town combines the two worlds of the Space Age Future and Yesterday. Besides special rides and exhibits Time Town has created a special trip to a faraway planet in its Flying Saucer.

Youth in the News—Plans

Higher education plans loom large as August passes the half-way mark.

Corinne B. Feinberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Feinberg of Minnewaska Trail, Kerhonkson plans to pursue her Master of Science degree in Spanish at State University College at New Paltz this fall. She graduated from C.W. Post College, Brookville, L.I. earlier this year with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Spanish education.

Louis R. Leo, son of the late

Louis A. and Eva M. Leo of Shandaken, will be entering his second year at Temple University School of Medicine in Philadelphia, Pa. A graduate of Ulster County Community College and attended Richmond College, Staten Island, part of City University of New York, where he maintained a straight A average, graduating first in his class with a Bachelor of Science in biology.

He credits UCCC with giving him a good start toward making his educational dreams a reality. Thanks to UCCC, he said, "I was fully prepared for further education."

Summer was graduation time for Judith I. Begelspiker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Begelspiker of 38 Route 44-55, Gardiner. She was among students of the Class of 1972 who graduated from the Department of Nursing, Faculty of Medicine, Columbia University, July 28.

She attended Kings College, Briarcliff Manor before matriculating at Columbia's School of Nursing.

And still the dean's list reports continue to come to the attention of Youth in the News, spotlighting academic achievement of area students.

A number of area students were included in the dean's list at State University Agricultural and Technical College at Delhi. They include Barry F. Simmons of Rhinebeck, a freshman in business management; Steven E. Jones, New Paltz, engineering technologies freshman; Mark Werbalowsky, Kingston, hotel, restaurant and food services management freshman; and Barbara A. Snyder of Rhinebeck, parks and recreation freshman.

Also, Solomon Edwards, Kingston, Charles A. Tozzi, New Paltz, and James D. Donelli of Grahamsville, all vocational education seniors; James M. Cornwell, New Paltz, hotel, restaurant and food services management senior.

Also, Edwin R. Kipp, Rhinecliff, Douglas H. Pettit of Kingston, Nicholas J. Tozzi, New Paltz and Peter A. Van Etten of Rhinecliff, all vocational education seniors.

Two Ulster County students have been named to the dean's list at Hartwick College, Oneonta. They are Herbert J. Epstein, son of Herbert Epstein Sr. of Box 237, Phoenicia, a senior economics major and

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis R. Wallace of 37 Witch Tree Lane, Woodstock, a senior majoring in French.

Four Ulster County students at St. Lawrence University, Canton, earned high academic ratings during the past semester. They are Holly N. Hurd of Hurds Road, Clintondale; Chester A. Baltz III of 84 Madison Avenue, Kingston; Mary E. Winkky of 34 North Oakwood Terrace, New Paltz and Kathleen K. Schoonmaker of Stone Ridge. Jean C. Embree of RD 3, Kingston was one of 197 New York State students earning dean's list honors at the University of Vermont. She is a student at the College of Arts and Sciences at the Burlington campus.

Jacqueline A. Olivet, a sophomore at Colby College, Waterville, Me., received recognition for academic achievement during the second semester. The daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John A. Olivet of 75 St. James Street, she is a graduate of Kingston High School and is majoring in government.

Douglas J. Clancy of 30 Janet Street, Kingston was named to the dean's list at Holy Cross College, Worcester, Mass. He is a member of the Class of 1974.

CONFERRING WITH CONGRESSMEN — Cynthia Holliday of New Paltz visits with Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr. at his Washington office during the 26th annual session of Girls Nation, sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary. Cynthia was among 100 high school juniors, two from each of the 50 Girls State Sessions held earlier this summer. Rep. Fish said, "I think it an honor not only for Cynthia but for our entire Hudson Valley area that she was one of the girls selected to attend this year's training session."

Winter in Brazil

Summer adventures for area teens have taken many routes but there are few who spend the summer "wintering."

Carolyn Viskocil, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Viskocil, Arnold Drive, Woodstock, is doing just that. As a AFS Scholarship student from Onondaga Chapter, she is traveling and studying this summer in Brazil where it is winter now. She is the guest of the Balbino de Carvalho family in Belo Horizonte.

In an account of her experiences she wrote that the nine-hour bus trip from Rio de Janeiro to Belo Horizonte was through mountainous terrain over twisting roads, along deep gorges through hillsides of banana trees and other exotic plants. Darkness fell suddenly at 5 p.m. Then there was the blaze of lights at her destination and the warm welcome of Momae, her Brazilian host mother and Veronica and Riza Maria, her host sisters.

The whole family was soon talking excitedly over ice cream and then home to distribute gifts, unpack and admire Carolyn's former jeans. More friends to meet and more Portuguese words to learn left her breathless. There were invitations to parties and much listening to "names like things you never heard before."

At first she understood very little but "Veronica and Riza talk slowly so I'll learn."

Carolyn's host father worries that she eats too little. Carolyn is trying to please, but too many courses come too the first day jumped out of her seat when the dismissal siren sounded, but sat back when she realized the teachers move and students stay in the room.

Social activities have been whirlwind. Carolyn was surprised and pleased the first night she was serenaded by a young Brazilian who sang "outside our door."

She says there are parties all the time. "Everyone of all ages attends." She adds that she is learning to samba.

The travel agenda calls for visits to the famed beaches of Rio and Momae and Riza; soccer games and European Choral concerts which are great favorites with the teenagers of Brazil.

Carolyn will return early in September to enter State University of New York at Buffalo.

4-H Youth Have Role at State Fair

Four-H youth from all over the state participate in the diverse activities featured in the State Fair's Youth Building — everything from homemaking exhibits and dress revues to urban affairs, poultry science, crops, ornamental horticulture, communication arts, and plant pathology exhibits.

Tuesday and Wednesday of Fair Week, 4-H'ers from the southwestern portion of the state will man exhibits and demonstrations in the building. Taking over on Thursday and Friday will be youth from the southeastern part of the state and over the Labor Day Weekend, youngsters from the northern and central regions of the state will hold down the fort.

This year for the first time these young people — some 800 of them — participated in a mid-summer orientation program at the State Fairgrounds. It was the first time many of them had ever been to the Fairgrounds and consequently facilitated their duties during Fair Week. The program was initiated as a result of evaluation by other 4-H youth who have demonstrated their skills at past State Fair's.

Theme of the home economics exhibit this year is "Kids Care" (About Kids). It is keyed to the care of 3-5 year-olds and covers the areas of child development, food, clothing, and natural environment. Demonstration and dialogue are the emphasis here.

Another interesting 4-H exhibit will be the Consumer Education Booth which will concentrate this year on the much-discussed topic of harmful toys. The 4-H youngsters, who have researched this topic, will point out things Fairgoers should watch out for when buying toys. They are also equipped with a list of toys that have been banned by the Food and Drug Administration.

Fairgoers will also be interested to know the kind of work 4-H city youth have been doing in urban affairs. This will be the second year for the popular Urban Booth, manned by urban 4-H groups across the state.

4-H boys and girls also work and compete at other locations on the Fairgrounds including the Pure Foods Bldg., where they demonstrate how to cook and buy meat and the Horticulture Bldg., where they demonstrate baking with cherries for the State Cherry Growers Association.

In addition, 4-H youth are competing at the State Fair with their livestock and are also involved in the agricultural engineering skills of tractor operation and automotive skill. The Agricultural Education Shop demonstrations and exhibits are located in the Youth Court of the Farm Machinery Bldg.

Youngsters will distribute Smile buttons to fairgoers as part of the 4-H Host and Hostess program. They also serve as official hosts in the Art and Home Center working with senior citizens and in the demonstration kitchen.

TEEN SCENE Steering Right Course

Don't look now, but it's that time of year again. Department stores are filled with racks of perma-pressed jeans and red plaid dresses, hardware stores are featuring looseleaf notebooks and magic markers, and the paper has printed the school bus schedule. Oh well, you were almost tired of vacation anyway—weren't you? Well, that's rough, it's keep-on-busing time again.

The courses you'll be taking in high school were probably worked out by your parents, your school counselors, and you when you were in your early teens. For most of you, the schedule of courses has probably turned out to be just right. However, some students find, particularly as they near their last two years of high school, that the plan made for their high school studies needs a little updating.

Usually, there are separate courses of studies chosen depending on whether the student plans on attending college or not. The student who is going to college generally takes a series of courses designed to meet the entrance requirements of most colleges. The student who does not plan on going to college usually takes a series of courses planned to instruct him in his future vocation.

After several years, though, the plans of the student may change. What happens quite often is that a student is influenced in his or her choice by his or her parents and the counselor. Mary's parents may be sure that Mary is going on to college to become a teacher like her mother, or Mark's father may want him to take shop courses so that he can take over the garage after his father retires. When Mark and Mary were in their early teens, they may have agreed with those plans. But at seventeen, perhaps Mary has decided she would rather be a homemaker—she is planning to get married right after she graduates, and domestic science courses would be a lot more help to her than college-preparatory subjects. Mark is beginning to think he would rather be a lawyer, and that he has no real aptitude for fixing car engines. If Mary and Mark continue to take their original courses, not only will they be poorly prepared for life after graduation, but they will probably make poor grades in the courses they are taking.

Actually, poor grades can be the first sign that a student is taking the wrong courses. Low grades indicate inattention and boredom far more often than they indicate stupidity. The student who wants to drop out, and who thinks that formal studies are unrelated to his life is probably taking the wrong studies.

If you are taking studies that interest you, and that have some bearing on what you plan to do when you finish school, pat yourself on the back, and go back to sharpening your pencils. If not, sit down and have a talk with your parents and school counselor.

Some of you may have older friends—or brothers and sisters—who graduated from college and then want to work as truck drivers or receptionists. Some economists claim that for about a decade, America became so preoccupied with education that it turned out more college graduates than it could use, and many of them ended in jobs for which they were over-educated but poorly-trained. One girl, looking for a job, moaned that she'd give her four years of college for one year of shorthand.

Ironically, other graduates discovered that you couldn't get a job without two years of college, at least. Jobs such as librarians, secretaries, bank tellers, and counselors became more demanding as far as education went. Today, with computers even being used in automobile repair, the needs for a specialized education increase every year.

Many girls, finding increased opportunities in fields previously dominated by men, are changing their educational plans to take advantage of the changes. Lana changed, for instance, from a secretarial course to college preparatory when her parents pointed out that she could not only be a legal secretary—she could be a lawyer!

Education is a means, not an end. You aren't going back to the classroom in a week or so to get the diploma or to add to your store of facts, or to hang around with your crowd. You're going back to prepare yourself for your life after you get the class ring. If you tailor your education to other people's plans instead of your own, you will not only be wasting your high school years, you'll be entering the adult world less well-equipped to handle it than you could be. Your parents and those who educate you probably understand this—and you should, too.

Tech Tools of Trade

DES MOINES (UPI)—Man's two most special tools, his mind and his hands, can be harmonized to make a most complete and adaptable person.

Such is the philosophy of Des Moines Technical High School. From its beginnings as a training ground for defense workers in World War II it has developed into one of the few "comprehensive" high schools in the country.

John Bell, head of the trade division of the school, calls Tech "a plus school."

"When a kid graduates from Des Moines Technical High School, he can go to the University of Iowa," Bell said. "But he can also earn a living."

The 1,500 students at Tech take the full academic schedule required by all the other Des Moines high schools, but they also add three hours of vocational training daily for 2½ years.

Tech Principal Don Blackman said any student whose academic work is average or better is fully qualified to go on to college or enter directly into a skilled job. About one fourth of Tech's graduates go on to college.

Tech owes its development of a wide range of vocational training courses to an enthusiastic school board and business community.

Tech now offers seven general training areas—art, business, food service, clothing trades, drafting, health careers and trade and industrial studies—and a total of 28 fields of specific skills such as printing, auto mechanics, aviation, dental hygiene and computer programming.

One of the most interesting and time-consuming projects Tech students have undertaken recently is the complete construction of a three bedroom house. More than 70 students from eight areas participated in the project at various times, and the students sold the house for $27,000 after two days of showings.

Blackman said the carpentry students built the brick-front frame house. The cabinet makers installed a $3,000 kitchen, the commercial painting students painted and hung wallpaper, and the sheet metal students took care of the duct work throughout the house.

The air conditioning and refrigeration division installed heating and air conditioning, and the industrial electrical students worked on the wiring. The commercial printing students produced all the advertising for the project.

Tech architectural students revised the original blueprint by an area architect, and the Greater Des Moines Board of Realtors sold the house without a fee as a public service.

Bell said in the future, the school plans to build one house each year.

Even within the school's technical training, the emphasis is on expanding the number of time drawing students. Options available. For example, a student who goes through the machine shop program can handle any of a cluster of 800 related jobs.

"These aren't hobby programs," Blackman said. "Each of the teachers in the vocational area really feels added that many area parents countable for his students. It's not like a liberal arts course. If school with a fully qualified kid goes out on the job and college preparatory program."

can't cut it, he'll lose his job."

Tech also has a comprehensive cooperative arrangement with community businesses. Lyle Smith, who heads the coop program, said it allows the students to get on-the-job experience in the "core area" before graduation. Students involved in the coop program go to school half a day and work the other half at a job in their chosen field.

Housed in a renovated Model T Ford assembly plant, Tech gets its students from all over the city on a strictly volunteer basis. "There's not one kid here who has to come," Blackman said.

Blackman said the school's lifeline to the community is vital to its success. He said businessmen and shop owners in Des Moines belong to the school's advisory committees and help keep school administrators in touch with the latest developments in business and the trades.

Blackman said despite Tech's range of programs and advanced facilities, it has a hard time drawing students. It attributes this to family loyalties to other area schools and parents' concern that their children must go on to college.

Blackman said, "Parents think this is a great program—for somebody else's kid—but of the teachers in the vocational area really feels added that many area parents countable for his students. It's not like a liberal arts course. If school with a fully qualified kid goes out on the job and college preparatory program."

Cadet Applications

The United States Coast Guard Academy has announced that it is now accepting and processing applications for appointment as Cadet, U.S. Coast Guard, Class of 1977.

Appointments to the Coast Guard Academy are given solely on the basis of an annual nationwide competition with no congressional appointments or geographical quotas. Applications for appointment must be submitted to the Director of Admissions, U.S. Coast Guard Academy, prior to Dec. 15, 1972, and candidates must arrange to participate in the prescribed College Entrance Examination Board tests prior to or including the Dec. 2, 1972 administration.

The competition for appointment as Cadet is based on the candidate's high school rank, his performance on the CEEB Scholastic Aptitude Test, Achievement Test, and either Level I or Level II Mathematics Achievement Test, and his leadership potential as demonstrated by his participation in high school extracurricular activities, community affairs or part-time employment. Most successful candidates rank in the top quarter of their high school class and demonstrate proficiency in both the mathematical and applied science fields.

To qualify for the competition, an applicant must be unmarried and must have reached his 17th birthday by July 1, 1973. The minimum educational requirement is a high school diploma; however, high school seniors assured of graduation by June 20, 1973, are eligible to compete provided they have at least 15 credits by that time. Applicants must have completed three units in English, and three in mathematics including algebra and plane or coordinate geometry or their equivalents.

Coast Guard cadets obtain an excellent undergraduate education at no personal cost and, in addition, receive pay and allowances fully adequate to fulfill all their ordinary living expenses. The constantly updated Academy curriculum offers liberal arts, engineering, and professional subjects, with a choice of thirteen academic options which include: general, ocean, marine, electrical, nuclear and civil engineering; mathematics; computer science; ocean science; physics; chemistry; history and government; and economics and management.

These areas of academic interest, combined with the varied elective courses, establish a solid foundation for a challenging career. Graduates of the Academy are awarded a Bachelor of Science degree and are commissioned as Ensign in the United States Coast Guard. Selected officers may pursue further postgraduate education and specialized training in many leading civilian and military graduate or professional schools in such fields as aviation, business administration, electronics, engineering, law, naval architecture, and oceanography.

The young Academy graduate can look forward to a varied, exciting, and demanding career as a regular Coast Guard officer. In wartime the Coast Guard functions as a specialized part of the Navy; however, in peacetime it performs essential humanitarian missions vital to the safety and saving of lives at sea.

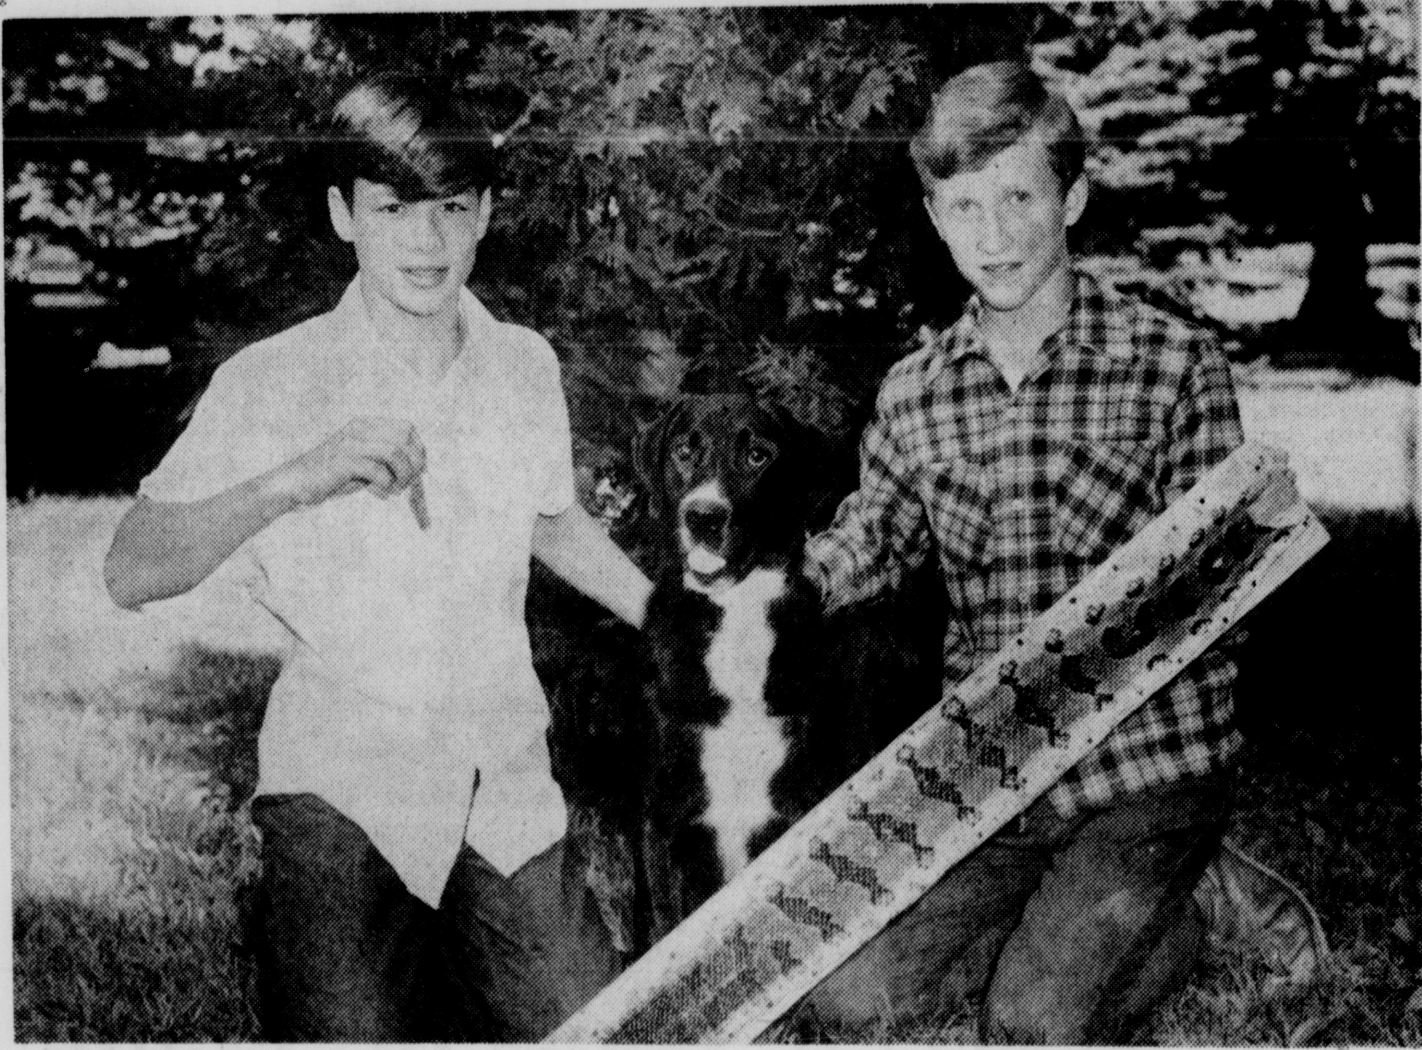

Under the auspices of the Department of Transportation, the Coast Guard establishes and coordinates search and rescue operations by ship and plane, maintains advanced electronic and other aids to navigation scattered around the globe, operates the icebreakers which clear the way for all polar expeditions, enforces marine law and all aspects of Merchant Marine safety, and maintains a high degree of military readiness to fulfill its Naval wartime commitment.

Applications and additional information may be obtained by writing to: Director of Admissions, United States Coast Guard Academy, New London, Connecticut 06320.

PROJECT AIM — Kevin J. Garrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome F. Garrison of 110 Clifton Avenue, Kingston, participates in Project Aim at the Coast Guard Academy at New London. The annual tour sponsored locally by Flotilla 20-4 United States Coast Guard Auxiliary, Kingston, is designed to familiarize high school students from all parts of the country with the life of Academy cadets. Others from the area selected were Dwight Dinsmore of RD 4, Kingston, and Joseph Finger of Saugerties as alternates.

Ulster County Happenings... Pictorial Review

BOYS' BEST FRIEND—Keith F. Olsen holds the rattle and Mark Warnecke holds the skin of a four-foot, 6½-pound timber rattler the boys (along with Brian Lackemann) killed on Overlook Mountain earlier this month. The boys were HOMELESS "TIGER"—This young blond-colored mixed retriever is at the Ulster County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals shelter on Brabant Road, Town of Ulster waiting for some family in the area to adopt it and provide a good home and care. Named "Tiger", the 10 month old male dog is good with children. Anyone wanting to adopt this fine dog should visit the SPCA shelter and arrange with an employee to take it home. Many other dogs of various sizes and breeds are also available for adoption. (Freeman photo by Kruh)

The Lantern... 'Lovely'

By JACK McEENEY

The Cape Cod, attractive and durable, and so typical of rural localities throughout the country, remains one of the most popular of all home designs. In addition to its ancestry — it was the earliest type American dwelling — it has qualities that has endeared it to all generations inasmuch as it not only presents a pretty picture, but also provides most effective use of available space. Today's feature, called "The Lantern," exudes solid tradition, and even with modern construction methods it still has the exact appearance of a similar dwelling built many years ago.

The floor plan consists of an average size family type kitchen, living room with fireplace and boxed picture window. The two average size bedrooms have standard wardrobe space.

The exterior is finished with red cedar shingles painted white or white cedar shingles left natural, with a black shingle roof, all of which present a solid appearance.

The basic house dimensions are 32 feet x 26 feet with an overall, including the garage, of 43 feet 6 inches. The living space contains 832 square feet.

The complete building plans show construction with full basement and without basement, and are available at moderate cost by using the accompanying coupon.

Tips for the Home

By United Press International
Air conditioning for the home, without a central system, and without window units. Made possible with the new Comfort-Aire remote system that places the condenser on a slab outside the home, runs precharged refrigerant lines through the wall to an evaporator unit on the inside wall. Designed for quiet operation and do-it-yourself installation, the units come in three cooling capacities from 6,000 to 15,000 BTU's. (Heat Controller, Inc., 1900 Wellworth Ave., Jackson, Mich. 49203)

Black light fluorescent lamps for unusual effects in bedrooms, gamerooms, family rooms and dens. The Black Light lamps, used for some time in night clubs for psychedelic effects, are used in the home to "light" fluorescent posters, walls painted with fluorescent paints, and to bring out unusual colors in rock, stamp and even insect collections. Can be installed in regular fluorescent lamp fixtures. (Westinghouse, 3 Gateway Center, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15222)

Your Horoscope - - Today and Monday

Sunday, August 20

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get busy and do a favor for one who has not only been kind to you in the past, but can be even more helpful now. This is a good day to take health treatments you need. Get to bed fairly early tonight.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Doing favors for others now can add to goodwill you enjoy. Be sure to give credit where credit is due. Show others you are devoted and kind. Bring out your finest and best talents.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are able to express your finest ideas to all who can help you make a success of them. Loved one is highly favorable to you, and much happiness can be yours. A spirit of generosity is wise.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Stating your views to associates regarding backing in the future and making certain changes in policy matters is best now. Out to favorite amusements together later. Try not to be extravagant, though.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get into that plan with one who is philanthropic or civic minded for excellent results now. Plan time to take health treatments you need and build up your strength. The future can be very active.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Forget the social today and secure the facts you need at right sources. The romantic side of life is fine, however. Do not neglect to handle that correspondence that is important right now.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Ideal day to understand what your true aims are and take the right steps in such direction. Try to be with friends of long standing as much as possible. Do something constructive of a civic nature.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You now have considerable energy. The mental and physical vitality can be put to valuable use in studying whatever is at your fingertips which will help you plan a course of action that can lead to greater success and better organization.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those charming young people who can build a fine foundation for self, so be sure to give the best education you can afford. Make sure also that the practical side of life is stressed, and then there can be an outstanding career in whatever has to do with finances and real estate in particular. Teach early to show more friendliness to others and to use that fine smile more. Sports are excellent here.

Money Clips

On April 2, 1792, Congress corrected in Section 13 of the passed the first U.S. coinage act of Jan. 18, 1837. It reads: "The value of a silver dollar in part '... and upon the reverse of the Dime shall be the figure of an eagle with wings spread, perched on a shield, with the inscription, 'UNITED STATES OF AMERICA' and a dollar, quarter-dollar, dime and half-dime were to be in an exact proportion to their fractional part of the dollar."

Section 10 designated the design requirements for each coin in each denomination, but while this section was specific regarding the device or emblem, it failed to provide for the visual value on gold and silver coins. Only the copper pieces were to be identified by denomination.

Section 10: And be it further enacted that upon the said coins "C" was placed in radius below respectively there shall be the following devices and legends, the denomination of the said coins shall be the impression emblematic of "QUAR. DOL." Certainly Liberty and the year of the prettier than 25 C. but more coinage; and upon the reverse of each gold and silver coin or no schooling in the English there shall be the figure or language. Especially since the representation of an eagle with first 25-cent piece measured 1 1/16 inches and the second 1 1/8 inches in diameter; the second of each of the copper issues after 1831 measured 15/16 inches there shall be an in- of an inch.

The position of the arrows in the denomination of the piece, the great seal on the reverse namely, cent or half-cent as the case may require.

The act assumed there would protocol holds this to be an less difficulty in recognizing indication or preference for mill the value of gold and silver conflict. So, in 1815 the coinage than there would be in wrong was righted to satisfy distinguishing the difference diplomatic critics, the arrows between a cent and a half-cent, were transferred to the left. The omission of value on all talon and the sprig of laurel but copper coinage was to the right talon.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) If you engage in creative work early, this can prove to be a most fascinating day. Go out for amusement later in the day. Making conditions at home more harmonious is wise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Showing loyalty to family is fine and encouraging them is also good. Do some entertaining at home for a change. Be sure that those you invite are congenial. Show you have poise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Ideal day to keep appointments that are important. Much productivity is possible now.

Once your work is done, engage in recreation and hobby you like. Avoid extravagance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You want to have greater abundance and you can do so by taking steps in the right direction. Let an influential business expert show you the shortcuts in putting an idea to work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are able to go out socially and join in mutually interesting projects with the right people. Be sure to improve your appearance. Show more devotion to mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You cannot rely today on higher-ups to assist you with any problems you may have, so do your own thinking. Get rid of what is not usable at home and replace with something new.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You can add to prestige by going directly to a bigwig and getting assistance. Plan how to spend spare time more wisely. A good friend can be helpful to your advancement now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... HE OR SHE WILL BE one of those charming young people with fine judgment, and therefore can find it easy to advance rapidly in life. There is much ability here in problem solving. Give as fine an education as you can in any field that deals with the public. The scientific field is also good here.

South was an expert playing duplicate with a beginner for a partner. Hence, South wasted little time on scientific bidding and quickly set the contract at six hearts after his partner opened with one no-trump.

"Our expert didn't like what he saw when dummy hit the table. Not that there was anything wrong with the six-heart contract, but rather that there were 12 top tricks at either no-trump or hearts and that the field was going to be in the no-trump slam."

It was up to our expert to find a way to make seven hearts and after a little study he saw a way to score the extra trick provided one opponent held the long spade and the other the long diamond.

He drew trumps, discarding a club from dummy and noted East's diamond discard. Three rounds of diamonds came next (the third being ruffed) and when West discarded a club, business was looking up. Next came ace-king of spades and a spade ruff and now our expert decided to impress his partner.

Something New in Rondout District

By CARL GRAHAM

KYSERIKE

The Rondout Valley Middle School is the setting this summer for something new in the school district — a federally funded six-week educational program for children of migrant workers in the area.

The program is administered through the Bureau of Migrant Education of the New York State Education Department and is directed locally by Miss Gloria Gonzales.

Four teachers, Mrs. Emily Stokes, Mrs. Gail Hilsenbeck, Peter Hengstenberg, and Vincent Fisher, handle the academic side, emphasizing individual tutoring whenever possible. They are assisted by Sharon Elston, Cynthia Raymond, and Kathleen Schoonmaker, three Rondout Valley High School graduates now attending college.

Others on the staff are Mrs. Lois Curran, school nurse-teacher; John Million, physical education instructor; Peter Gaspar, recreational activity coordinator; and Mrs. Anna Kolodziej-ski, who cooks the lunches and the snacks.

Miss Gonzales, a native of Texas, grew up in a community where there were many migrant families and has worked with migrant children in Texas, California, and New York. Last summer she worked in the migrant education program in New Paltz.

She said there are many common misconceptions about migrants.

"For example, it's not true that migrant parents are little concerned with their children's education," she said. "After all, the program is voluntary—the children attend because the parents wish them to be here."

Special

She also noted that strong family ties among migrants are shown daily on the bus, where older children look after the younger ones.

The 34 children in the program arrive at 8:30 a.m. and go home at 4 p.m. They range in age from 4 to 14 and are grouped by age for classroom instruction.

The instruction stresses the communications skills—reading, writing, and speech. Mathematics has an important place, along with some science and social studies. Instruction is bilingual, since most of the staff has some proficiency in Spanish.

Field trips provide breaks in the classroom routine. The children recently spent two days at the 4-H camp in New Paltz. Hamburgers and hot dogs cooked over an open fire and toasted marshmallows, topped off with watermelon and cookies, were a completely new experience for many of the children.

Miss Gonzales believes that relating school activities and instruction to the child's own experience is the secret of successful education, and this approach is emphasized in the Rondout Valley program.

A day care center for children up to three years of age is maintained at Christ the King Episcopal Church in Stone Ridge. About 20 children are cared for there in a separate program under the New York State Migrant Child Care Program, sponsored by the New York State Federation of Growers and Processors. The day care center is under the supervision of Mrs. Sandra Schirmer, assisted by Mrs. Donna Fisher, Kristin Schoonmaker, Brenda Howland, and Kenneth Knapp, with John Zakarissen doing the cooking.

The center is more than a mere babysitting service. Games, music, art work, finger games, and playground activities are provided for all who are old enough to participate.

"A good education for migrant children is more important today than ever before," Miss Gonzales believes. "With agriculture becoming more and more mechanized, the day may not be far off when there will be little farm work for migrants. Their children need to be prepared for other types of work, other ways of life, and education is the key."

Purpose of Visit Remains A Mystery

Kissinger Briefs President on Viet Talks

RELAXING BEFORE CONVENTION—President Nixon relaxes with his Irish setter, King Timahoe, at his Camp David retreat near Thurmont, Md. The Chief Executive has been working on the acceptance speech he will deliver at the Republican National Convention. (UPI Telephoto)

THURMONT, Md. (UPI)—President Nixon conferred Saturday night at Camp David with Henry A. Kissinger immediately after his top foreign policy adviser returned from a week of around-the-world diplomacy involving Vietnam.

Kissinger joined Nixon at the President's secluded mountain-top lodge for an informal dinner meeting shortly after his jetliner touched down at Andrews Air Force Base near Washington, ending a mission that took him to Paris, Saigon and Tokyo.

Kissinger flew to Camp David by helicopter, arriving shortly before 6 p.m. EDT, and stepped into a waiting car for the short ride to the rustic presidential retreat in the Catoctin mountains.

Nixon's decision to hear

Kissinger's report at Camp David was in keeping with the tight cover of secrecy which surrounded the foreign policy aide's talks first with North Vietnamese peace negotiators in Paris and then with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu in Saigon.

No details have been made public concerning Kissinger's conference in Paris with North Vietnamese politburo member Le Duc Tho or his two days of talks with Thieu.

Speculation has run the full range from imminent peace to protracted war. The few known facts would support almost any theory.

One version was that Kissinger and Tho reached an understanding on a formula for at least ending U.S. participation in the fighting and that Kissinger then flew to Saigon to break the news to Thieu. Another version was almost the reverse—that the Kissinger-Thieu talks broke down and Kissinger discussed strategy for continued war with Thieu.

Thieu returned to Hanoi immediately after his meeting with Kissinger.

Nixon invited Kissinger, Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Kissinger's deputy, Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Haig, to dinner at Aspin Lodge, the presidential residence at the Camp David compound, where Nixon has been staying since Monday.

In addition to reporting on his Vietnam talks, Kissinger will tell the President about his meeting earlier Saturday with Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka of Japan.

Kissinger stopped in Tokyo to put the finishing touches on plans for Nixon's three-day meeting with Tanaka in Hawaii beginning Aug. 31.

The American and Japanese leaders are expected to talk about Japan's coming rapprochement with China and about pressing trade problems.

Nixon's envoy held 18 hours of discussion with both Tanaka and Japanese Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ohira. After his departure, a U.S. embassy spokesman said: "After Dr. Kissinger's meeting with Prime Minister Tanaka, the prime minister requested that the foreign minister should prepare an economic agreement in advance of Hawaii to be presented at the meeting."

Meanwhile, in Washington, Democratic presidential nominee George S. McGovern met with former Attorney General Ramsey Clark Saturday to receive a personal review of Clark's controversial trip to inspect bombing damage in North Vietnam.

Clark drove to McGovern's Japanese-style home for an hour-long briefing after which the former Johnson administration official told newsmen the renewed bombing of North Vietnam was a "moral outrage."

He also described Kissinger's mission to Paris and Saigon as "globe-trotting personal diplomacy."

Clark said he hoped his mission to Hanoi had not added to McGovern's troubles.

"I've got confidence in the judgment of the American people," he said. "...I don't believe in guilt by association, so I hope I don't prejudice his cause."

Several Republicans have charged that Clark was "duped" by the communists into traveling to North Vietnam and claiming that American bombing had damaged schools, hospitals and dikes. McGovern said last week Clark may have made an error in "judgment and taste" by criticizing American policy on foreign soil, but he defended Clark against the Republican charges.

Clark said Kissinger's overseas mission last week was a "dangerous" substitute for quiet diplomacy to end the war. "I don't believe in one man carrying the fate of nations in his vest pocket," he said.

He also charged that the President's decision to increase the bombing of North Vietnam on the eve of the Republican National Convention, was merciless, purposeless and a moral outrage.

Republican Platform ... Busing Opposition Cited

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The Republican platform declares the party "irrevocably opposed to busing for racial balance" in a draft agreed on Saturday by the party's platform committee.

The committee, drawing up the party document to be voted on Tuesday, the second day of the convention, has included this declaration. Chairman John J. Rhodes told newsmen.

The draft platform also promises to end economic controls as soon as possible and reform and simplify taxes. But no exact dates are offered.

The drafters also were preparing language supporting women's demands for equal advancement in government and business and for government-aided day care for the children of working mothers. But there was no plank for or against easing abortion laws.

Rhodes also disclosed that platform writers have dropped their 1968 endorsement of state right-to-work laws. This apparently is a concession to the AFL-CIO, whose president, George Meany, has declared neutrality in the presidential contest.

Last try at national anti-war Convention. Story Page 27.

Rhodes conceded that political factors played a part in the decision not to revive the plank but said, "We have not repudiated the 1968 plank either." He repeated his denial that the White House had in effect drafted the whole platform, saying there was consultation but that the committee actually wrote the document.

Rhodes disclosed also that the platform calls for an investigation to determine what action should be taken to prevent national emergency strikes in the railroad and other transportation industries. Until recently, President Nixon has supported strong legislation, including a form of compulsory arbitration. The White House has withdrawn its support of the legislation as part of the campaign to woo labor, and the platform committee obviously had taken the cue.

The platform draft was being disclosed piecemeal in advance of the scheduled start of the party's national convention with an afternoon session Monday.

The texts of some portions were revealed while officials gave briefings on others as staff writers labored to write language embodying decisions made by the platform committee in a late-night session Friday. The platform will be voted on Tuesday.

The education plank says the party considers school busing for racial balance "counterproductive, unnecessary and wrong" and says the party would favor consideration of a constitutional amendment to outlaw it.

Rhodes said the platform also endorses voluntary prayer in schools.

It was understood also to endorse the principle of tax credits to help parents paying tuition to nonpublic schools.

Police Holding Material Witness in Slaying

Manhunt Continues for Murder Suspect

By SARI GRAHAM

COTTEKILL

A nationwide manhunt continues for William Edward Hill, the ex-convict wanted for the Tuesday night strangulation murder of Mrs. Alice Upright in her Cottekill home.

State Police issued an all-points bulletin for the 25-year-old Hill's arrest after swearing out a warrant Friday charging him with the murder of Mrs. Upright, whose bound body was found in the living room of her home Wednesday morning by a neighbor.

"He's our only suspect," Senior Investigator Michael Lisman said of Hill. "We have him pinned to the killing."

Police have not announced a motive for the slaying but said that an undetermined amount of cash had been taken from the widow's home.

Police also declined to reveal how Hill had become the prime suspect but his half-brother, Robert Hedrick of Plattekill, is being held in the Ulster County Jail as a material witness. He also faces a charge of criminal possession of stolen property.

Hedrick, 18, an unemployed mechanic, was arrested Friday by State Police after a battery stolen from a car near the Upright home was allegedly found in his possession.

Friday afternoon, Lisman and Senior Investigator Joseph Valicenti took the slender Hedrick before County Judge Raymond J. Mino as a material witness in Mrs. Upright's death.

Hedrick, who lives with his parents on Route 32 in Plattekill, told Mino he didn't have a lawyer and couldn't afford to hire one. Mino said he would appoint a lawyer for the youth, adjourned his case until 2 p.m. Monday, and set bail at $10,000.

Valicenti said there was no special significance to reports that police were checking a possible connection between Mrs. Upright's death and the shooting and beating of elderly Mrs. Mildred Taylor in Rhinebeck on April 19. Mrs.

Taylor died in Northern Dutchess Hospital on July 24.

"It's routine to check similar crimes in a case like this," Valicenti explained.

Police at Stony Point in Rockland County also discounted any connection between Hill, a former employee-tramcar at nearby Letchworth Village, and a robbery at the state hospital early Saturday. Three armed men robbed six employees and a visitor of $2,000 in cash and jewelry, but Stony Point police said that none of the three bandits fitted Hill's description.

Roadblocks set up earlier this week throughout the Hudson Valley have been discontinued, police said. Anyone having knowledge of Hill's whereabouts is asked to call Hurley State Police at 338-1702. All information will be kept strictly confidential.

NEW PALTZ

Nostalgia fever is gripping the nation. Yesteryear's most commonplace knick knacks excite the collector. The most utilitarian of early household goods earn prize niches in museums.

Lake Mohonk, with a long tradition of genteel resort living, is preserving its own brand of nostalgia for its returning patrons and newcomers alike.

In its Barn Museum and Craft Shop, just opened this season under the supervision of Dan Wilson, memories of another era are fondly kept intact.

Most of the items are from Mohonk's own collection of memorabilia dating back to the first days of the mountain top resort more than a century ago. Related craft shops illustrate how things were done in the past as well as creating modern adaptations.

The sound of hammer and anvil echoes through the smithy shop as of old. However, the end result is not shoes for horses but an elegant glass-topped coffee table with welded horseshoes as a base on wrought iron legs.

The thatched roof gazebo has been a Mohonk trademark through the years and visitors to the museum may see just how the thatching is accomplished.

Other craft areas show how horsehair mattresses were made and how the golf course was maintained.

Old carriages attest to the validity of the familiar sign, "Automobiles are not allowed on this property." For many years carriages were the only means of transportation at Mohonk proper and many are included in the barn displays. There is an old firetruck and a fascinating convertible landau sleigh.

There is a fine collection of old farm equipment including cultivators, planters, corn hillers of very early vintage. One of the most recent additions is a massive double horse treadmill through the courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Cole of Marbletown and the D & H Canal Historical Society museum.

The D & H Canal Society maintains a museum in the Old High Falls Schoolhouse open Friday, Saturday and Sunday 2 to 5 p. m. through the summer with exhibits of canal artifacts. The Coles donated the horse treadmill to the canal museum. Mrs. Warren Van Kleeck, museum chairman and her committee decided the structure would be appropriately displayed at the Mohonk Barn Museum and donated it against reciprocal exchange of canal-related articles.

The horse treadmill is indeed at home in Mohonk's barn. One had been used at Mohonk to operate wood saws before the days of gasoline engines.

Anyone with a memory of the old general store complete with cracker barrel checker games and kerosene lamps will feel right at home in the museum's shop. Antique collectors will find everything from Franklin stoves to bottles.

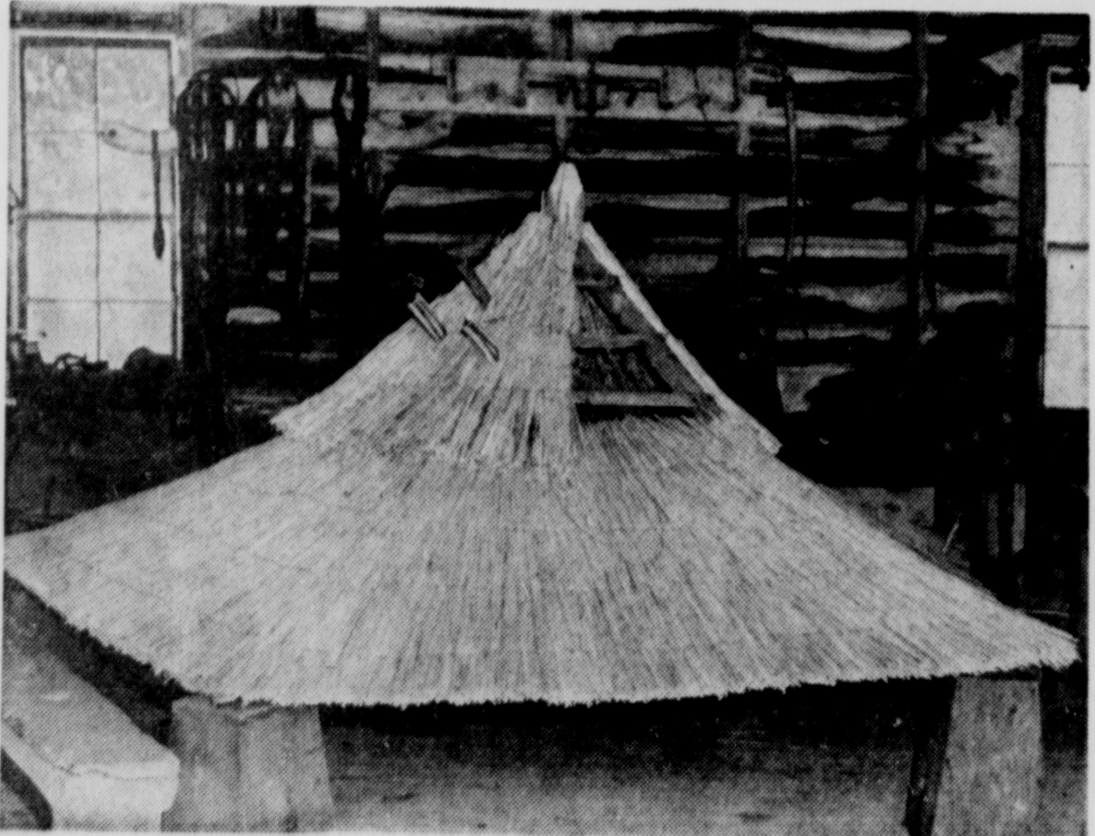

For a further trip down memory lane there is the old Lake Mohonk post office preserved intact with old letter boxes and weathered wainscoting.

Curator Wilson is on hand to welcome visitors 10 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. except Wednesday when hours are 1 to 5:30 p. m. A craftsman, philosopher and romanticist Wilson is a perfect guide to the museum's many treasures.

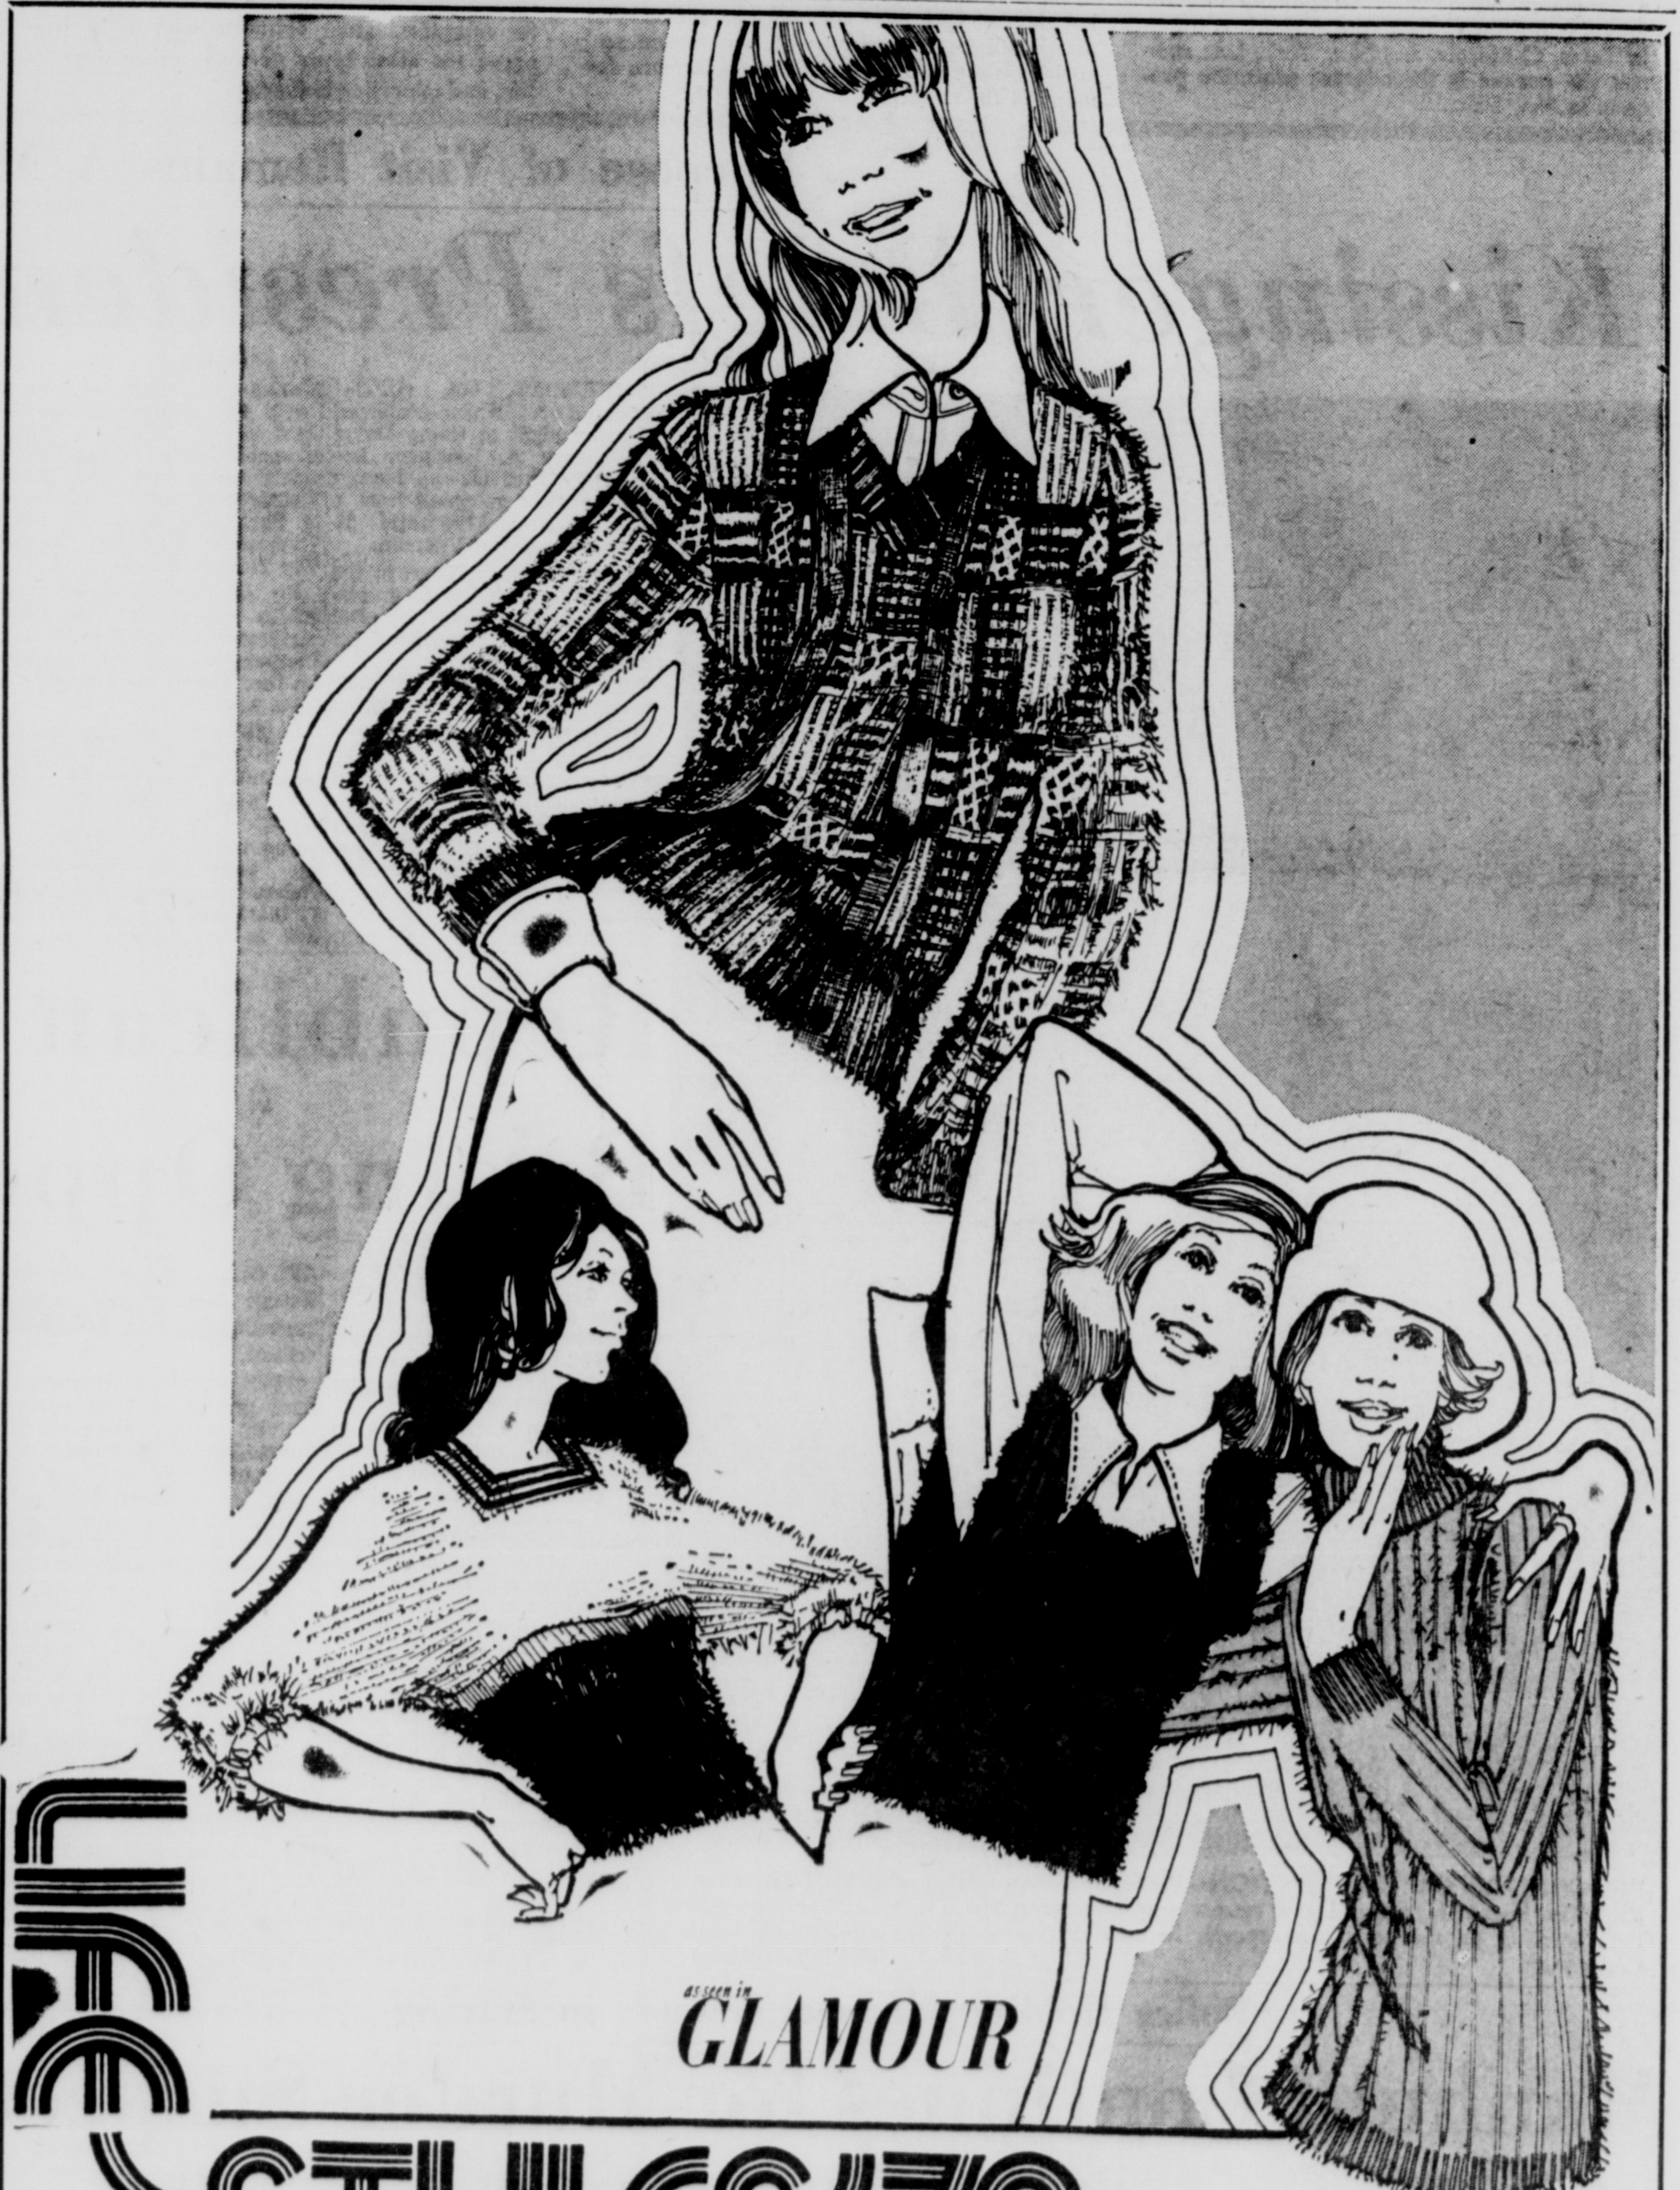

Even the barn housing the museum and craft displays is a trip in nostalgia. Gleaming in the summer sun, its stable doors open to the soft mountain breezes, the barn seems ready to send forth well groomed carriage horses to convey visitors around the spacious grounds. The clomp of restless hooves on the barn floor and the smell of sun ripened hay are in the air, conjured up by the very setting.

Children Learning... 'Education Not Frightening'

By JON POWERS

KINGSTON

Brain-injured children are learning that education need not be a frightening experience, thanks to a four-week summer program sponsored by the Ulster County Association for Children with Learning Disabilities.

Kevin Graham, a psychologist with the Saugerties Central School District, is supervising the program. Some 20 children from throughout Ulster County attend daily six-hour sessions at the Edson School.

Graham, along with his staff of two professional teachers, a library aide, a teacher aide and a student aide, emphasize individual work in reading and perceptual skills.

"Some of the kids actually tremble when they get a book in their hands," said Graham. They're so used to failure that the thought of performing in a classroom scares them to death."

"Our philosophy is that you learn more when you're comfortable," Graham added. "We try to make the kids comfortable here. It's an informal atmosphere; there's no competition."

Each day's session begins with an informal get-together between students and counselors. Then, the 20 students are divided into four groups. They move to separate classrooms and begin lessons in, for example, reading and writing.

But the program remains essentially unstructured. If a child doesn't want to participate in a given lesson, he doesn't. The purpose of the program is not to force feed education, but to show the youngsters that learning can be fun.

If we can show them that learning doesn't necessarily mean failure — that it can be fun and useful — then they'll be better equipped to cope with regular classwork," said Graham.

It should be emphasized that the children enrolled in the program are not incapable of learning; all are intelligent and some exhibit above-average intelligence. But physical or emotional impairments often block their ability to learn effectively.

Because it really doesn't matter what the children learn during the summer program, (there are no exams, no graduation from one grade to another) they aren't pressured into absorbing, and then reciting, facts and figures.

They know they won't be forced to learn," said Graham. We want them, first, to enjoy what they're doing. Once they can do that, the learning will come that much easier."

And the children do enjoy the program. They don't want to leave at the end of the day," said Graham. Part of the reason is the emphasis placed on recreation; the students go swimming three days a week at the Jewish Community Center, visit sites in town such as the police and fire stations, and participate in numerous sports and games at the Edson School gym and playground.

But the recreation serves a two-fold purpose. In addition to being just plain fun, it enables the youngster to associate the pleasures of recreation with normal classroom work. As a result, they may be more inclined, come September, to view schoolwork with less apprehension.

The 20 students range in age from five to 11; most are seven, eight and nine years old. Their parents pay a tuition of $20 a week. "At first, I think the parents believed the program would solve all their child's problems," said Graham, "but they realize now that the children are happy. That's the important thing."

Marist Pool ... Community

POUGHKEEPSIE Five years ago it was announced publicly that the Marist College pool was scheduled to be shut down.

The reason was simple. The Dutchess County Department of Health had ordered the college to install a certain type of filter system, to erect a fence around the perimeter, and made other modifications.

Marist could not afford it, according to Jack Dougherty, public relations man. An article appeared in the local press announcing that the pool would be closed down.

A concerned Poughkeepsie resident, Vincent J. Stearns, who runs an insurance business, read the article and phoned Marist. He spear-headed the formation of "The Citizens' Committee to Save the Marist College Pool," which ultimately raised about $23,000 toward the initial $27,000 outlay. Necessary changes ultimately came to about $30,000.

Since 1967 the large oval pool has been used by numerous groups and agencies as a token of appreciation by the college. It is reported to be the largest pool in Dutchess County, measuring about 50 yards by 100 yards, with diving board and depth reaching 14 feet.

"It's practically a community pool," noted Dougherty, ticking off several of the groups that plunge into its blue waters throughout the summer. The list included Neighborhood Service Organization community groups; patients from nearby Hudson River State Hospital; Upward Bound, a remedial program for students; the Poughkeepsie Children's Home; and the newly organized Children's Theater Group.

Lifeguards are on all summer, and anyone with a pass may use the pool free of charge. Passes are not difficult to obtain. Inquiry may be made through Dougherty or through William Austin, who is instructor of physical education at Marist; coach of the rowing team; and pool director.

In visiting the pool one recent sunny day we noticed a strange vacuum-like creature patrolling the bottom at the end of a long electric extension cord. Upon inquiring, we were advised that this creature meandered repeatedly across the bottom sucking up dirt and foreign matter, and when it ran into a wall it reversed itself and started off in another direction.

And a group of about 50 youngsters descended on this pastoral setting as we left, day campers from the Children's Theater Group on campus.

They were obviously very pleased to hit the water, oblivious of the history of concerned citizens who kept the Marist pool alive.

Fallout Shelters ... 'Public Apathy'

By HUGH REYNOLDS

KINGSTON Back in the early 60s, fallout shelters were all the rage in this country for there was little doubt that the Russians, given the slightest advantage, would level America with hydrogen bombs.

Billions were poured into defense and millions more in the fallout shelter program: finding them, determining their PF (protection factor) and stocking them with supplies to nourish the occupants for up to two weeks.

Ulster County is typical. Officials from the Army Corps came here twice in the late 60's, the last time in 1969 and left behind them 38,022 stocked shelters and 117,054 non-stocked shelters.

They probably won't be back, at least not to identify and stock fallout shelters. Times have changed.

"The (federal) government doesn't stock shelters anymore," Charles Arnold, Ulster County director of Civil Defense, told The Freeman. Arnold says the county needs about 60,000 more public shelters in order to provide protection for everyone in the event of nuclear attack. He says the prospect of getting them are "very slim." "The state used to give $25 a pupil for the construction of shelters in school buildings, but they don't do that anymore."

Arnold attributes the decline in the fallout shelter program to "public apathy" and an apparent confidence that the world situation is changing for the better. "It's the feeling of the general public," he says, "that Nixon, with his visits to China and Russia, has reduced the possibility of nuclear attack. We have to be prepared though." And, "even Congress says we'll never have another war . . . I'd hate to bet money on it."

Arnold is a man well versed in his profession. "Due to the prevailing winds, we don't expect fallout from New York City to the south or Albany to the west," he says. "The winds blow from the southeast to the northwest across Ulster County on a 60-mile wide track from western Pennsylvania through the southern tier of New York into New England."

The county, despite the lack of fallout shelters, has considerable other resources in the event of a nuclear disaster. There are 46 radiological units to measure radiation throughout the county, manned by trained personnel. A 200-bed mobile hospital is stored at the Catskill Reformatory at Napanoch. "a couple of hundred blood collecting outfits are stored at the municipal auditorium" in Kingston and six state aid station outfits which will rim the perimeter of any disaster area are available.

Still, Arnold and his staff keep busy. "We're busier than ever," he says. "We're more oriented toward natural disasters than nuclear disasters." Hurricane Agnes which swept through this summer provided Civil Defense officials in Western New York with plenty of work. Arnold is currently completing reports on damage from the storm in Ulster County.

There are two other programs administered by Civil Defense, the excess property program and the surplus property program. Both federal programs would seem to mean the same thing, but they don't.

Under the excess property program, in effect for less than a year, the federal government makes available to local Civil Defense offices lists of surplus heavy equipment (trucks, fire trucks, snowplows, tank trucks, etc.) which it will loan out to municipalities desiring them. Arnold then notifies town supervisors of what's available and forwards their requests to the federal government in Albany.

The terms of the "loan" are quite generous; the borrower has only to maintain the equipment and can keep it as long as three years after which the federal government can recall it if it wants to.

The surplus property program is similar in that it includes used federal government equipment, but no heavy equipment. Anything from ropes to typewriters can be purchased by authorized officials for their municipalities, at a considerable saving.

All this, as Arnold said, keeps his office busier than ever but one gets the impression that he wishes people would take the nuclear threat more seriously. "You should have been here in the Cuban Missile Crisis or when the Russians broke the nuclear moratorium. Those phones never stopped ringing," he says.

Public Swimming Areas... Under Constant Check

By MATT SPIRENG

KINGSTON
"If there's anything wrong the public will be the first to know."

These are the words of Harold Pinckney, public health sanitarian with the Ulster County Health Department who is in charge of investigation of public bathing facilities throughout the county.

Public swimming areas are operated under permit from the Department of Health which keeps close watch to see that no dangers to public safety are present.

According to Pinckney all public bathing facilities are spot checked at least three or four times during the summer. Areas where special problems may exist are checked more often. Also, complaints are followed up with investigation by the Health Department.

Investigation of the swimming areas does not only include tests of water quality, although that is an important facet, Pinckney told The Freeman. Supervision of the areas is also closely watched, he said. Shower and bathroom facilities are checked for adequacy and cleanliness. The lifesaving equipment and personnel are also checked. According to Pinckney, most drownings occur because there is not an adequate lifeguard in attendance.

Pinckney said the Health Department takes into account the fact that swimming and recreation are healthy for people. Thus, bathing facilities are not closed down unless definite hazards to public health are present. When dangers are found, however, there is no hesitancy on the part of the department to follow with whatever action is necessary to protect the public.

Owners and managers of bathing facilities are given no notice or warning that the Health Department teams are coming, Pinckney said. Thus, the areas must be kept in good condition at all times and no hasty cleaning-up can be done to fool the inspectors.

According to Pinckney, checks this summer have revealed that the public bathing facilities in Ulster County "are getting better." He said the water quality is remaining constant, but there is better protection from a public health standpoint in terms of lifeguards and shower and bathroom facilities.

Pinckney praised the team of college students who are hired by the Health Department for the summer to aid in the inspection of swimming areas. "We have gotten good, interested personnel this summer," he said.

Water is not necessarily a public health hazard even if it looks or smells bad, the public health sanitarian told The Freeman. He explained that there are a number of reasons why water could take on a bad appearance or odor, including algae growth, and that danger to public safety need not be present.

"Pathogenic bacteria are what we're really concerned about," Pinckney said, explaining that not even all such bacteria are disease causing agents. A count of such bacteria in the water is taken in what is called a "coliform index." According to Pinckney the coliform index in waters from bathing areas in Ulster County is either static or going down this summer in all cases.

"The only thing against us this summer is the weather. People didn't get a chance to use the facilities," Pinckney said.

A pollution study of the Hudson River is also being conducted by the Ulster County Health Department. Since the study is not yet completed, it is too early for a prediction to be made, Pinckney said. He did indicate, however, that preliminary results show that the level of pollution in areas tested in the Hudson is not increasing and appears to be on a decreasing trend.

In assuring public safety in swimming, Pinckney told The Freeman, "There is no area in the county where swimming is allowed where the bacteria level is great enough to cause a danger to health."

Dutchess Fair... 'Something Old, New'

By TIM SCHUSTER

RHINEBECK
"Something old and something new" always applies to the Dutchess County Fair, which will again combine the traditional in agriculture and entertainment with some innovations starting Tuesday.

A new $17,000 livestock pavilion, built with funds raised by area cattlemen, will be used for the first time at the fair this year. The pavilion became a goal of cattlemen after Hurricane Doria tore down cattle tents during the fair of 1971.

The pavilion's public address system was presented to the fair in memory of Herbert J. Show Association, Inc., of Rhinebeck, with the 1971 edition of the "Pony of America"

Journal and an active member of the fair's Board of Directors, year to nine classes.

Raymond Vail, livestock department assistant chairman, "B" by the American Horse Show Association in its junior hunter section; pony hunter division; green working hunter; working hunter; amateur-owned working hunter; and purebred Arabian divisions.

Sam Bridges of Rhinebeck is managing the show for the 22nd consecutive year. He has watched the show "grow from a barnyard show to one of the largest shows in the East."

Something new in entertainment will be the Estelle and Alfonso "Mickey and Minnie Mouse Revue," featuring giant Walt Disney characters at the grandstand.

The revue has been choreographed as a fast moving variety show that promises to appeal to all ages. The show's premiere is to be conducted Aug. 18 at Lincoln Center in New York.

Disney characters scheduled to appear include Goofy, Pluto, Donald Duck, the Seven Dwarfs, the Three Little Pigs and, of course, Mickey and Minnie Mouse.

Singers and dancers will participate in production numbers featuring the latest jazz techniques and, in contrast, one number will be "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?" in which the three pigs will be seen building comical houses.

And the traditional closing day highlight of the exposition is 127 years old — the firemen's parade.

More than 2,000 members of 24 Hudson Valley fire companies along with 15 drum corps and bands and 14 auxiliaries will participate in the Aug. 27 parade.

The parade will begin in the Village of Rhinebeck, enter the fairgrounds at the southern edge of the half-mile racetrack and culminate passing in review before the grandstand.

Thirty-three trophies, the largest number ever, will be awarded according to parade co-chairman George Crowley of the Rhinebeck Fire Department.

Cancer Patients Need 'Education'

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI)—Last February Fred Harris learned he had inoperable cancer in both lungs.

"Even through heavy sedation, it felt like I'd been knifed in the back," he recalls.

"I couldn't talk to my family. They were too disturbed. I couldn't talk to my doctor. He was too busy."

"When the medication wore off, it was worse. You tell yourself it's a bad dream, and you go through fits of hating everyone who's free of cancer. You have spurts of self-pity."

Some of his friends, not knowing what to say, avoided him altogether. Others falsely assured him he was looking great.

What would have helped most, Harris believes, would have been "to see some guy in a suit and tie walk into my hospital room, within my age bracket, who'd had lung cancer and who'd been on chemotherapy, and who had plans for some social and business activity, however limited."

During this decade, 3.5 million persons will die of cancer and 10 million persons will be treated for the disease, according to statistics of the American Cancer Society.

This means, Harris said, that "people have to be educated to the fact that a given percentage of the population either will have cancer, or will know someone who has it."

He sees a need for a program to help cancer patients face their problems head on and cope with whatever time or disability lies ahead.

The cancer society is studying Harris' proposal for a program whereby volunteer cancer patients will pay hospital calls on new victims, along with the same lines as the Reach for Recovery program, which sends women who have had a breast removed to visit new mastectomy patients.

All volunteers would be counseled by doctors and social workers "so they won't cause more damage than help."

Harris said, and volunteers would be restricted to three visits to one patient.

"This is to avoid the crutch situation and the emotional drain should the condition of either the helper or the helpee worsen," he explained.

Although the program is still in the planning stages, Harris has been making visits on his own. He tells other lung cancer patients that, four months out of the hospital, he is working about five hours a day.

"I'm not there to say, look at me, I'm healed, but to say, this is how I'm handling it—no showmanship, no lying, no dodging or evasiveness."

"I say I don't own my own boat anymore, but I still sail. I don't play 18 holes of golf like I used to, but I play nine."

One patient Harris called on was a grocery clerk.

"We were doing fine until he asked me whether my employer was giving me some compensation. What was I doing about keeping my job?"

"When I told him I was a realtor and owned my own business, I was lost. I wasn't the guy to help him. We had a different set of handicaps."

"So we're learning. Ideally, in matching the helper and helpee, we should also consider

Bruce Bioassat Says

Water Seeping Under GOP Doors

MIAMI BEACH (NEA) — Finding this city in the hands of the Republican party is like returning to familiar, reassuring landmarks. Within the councils, a sense of Roberts' Rules of Order prevails. Chaos seems something that troubles other people, such as Democrats. When the Democrats convened here in July, the known faces were scattered thinly in a sea of unknown. Many of the delegates looked like street people who simply had moved their sleeping bags onto the shag carpets in hotel rooms, and had hung official badges on their chests side by side with their peace symbols. This time, however, we're back to the suit-and-tie crowd and a convention with a mere 1,348 delegates, as against the Democrats 3,016. I saw more familiar political faces in a day than I saw in a week in the earlier convention. The tides of change and reform which swept over the proceedings in July have not yet engulfed the Republicans. But water is coming in under the door, and a fair number of GOP leaders are arguing, in discreet tones, that the tide should be let in. The specific demands, of course, are that the party in future conventions permit hundreds more delegates — and especially more women, young, and blacks. At this writing the final verdict is not in, but preliminary Rules Committee action makes it pretty plain that in 1976 and beyond, the delegate numbers will be a lot larger. Better balance will be sought, too, though finding a reasonable proportion of blacks may not be easy for a party that hasn't attracted them since 1936.

At least two things are motivating Republicans to open the door. One is a conviction among many that justice and fair play and new notions of "inclusionary democracy" compel the changes. The other is the feeling that political competition demands it, that the GOP can't hope to hang in there with the Democrats unless it welcomes the bidding tide — with all its unpredictability.

The mild ferment over this "opening up" business is giving a little drama to the otherwise sterile plot of renominating President Nixon and Vice President Agnew.

The debate over delegate enlargement discloses the anxiety many Republicans feel over the unpredictable aspect of the new tide. Biggest numbers mean more delegates for the more populous states, where the nation's new moods are most volatile.

Speakers for limited change say they want to protect states from being engulfed by the volatile large ones. Yet, in a key Rules Committee vote on a measure to enlarge the numbers while still giving smaller states a disproportionate share, big California voted against more sweeping change and modest sized Missouri and tiny Rhode Island voted for it. Clearly, something else is at work.

What that seems to be is the Republican party's old tug toward keeping things orderly and manageable. Most of the big states exhibit moderate-to-liberal strains which strike good club-rule Republicans as potentially ungovernable.

Some of the club-rule types think big reform spells "Stop Agnew," though no one knows he is even going to start in 1976. But the conservatives' instinct may be basically good. Sweeping change would surely stop a lot of things the club fellows would like to do in the years ahead.

'Run Scared'

Republican National Chairman Robert J. Dole is one politician who doesn't take Senator George McGovern lightly in the race for President. He concedes that, "I once did," underestimate McGovern.

Now, Dole, who is also U.S. Senator from Kansas, is telling fellow Republicans at Miami Beach for the party's national convention, "We should never be overconfident."

"If I were advising the President, I'd be out on the hustings running as if he were just one vote ahead," Dole continued. "We don't have a single vote to throw away."

Dole no doubt is keeping in mind the two times in this century when overconfident Republican candidates went to bed the night of the election believing they had won, only to awake to the terrible truth the next morning.

There was Charles Evans Hughes, who left the chair of a Justice of the United States Supreme Court in 1916, sure of election as President, only to see Woodrow Wilson the winner.

More recently, Harry S. Truman confounded the experts by winning in 1948 against an overconfident Republican, Thomas E. Dewey, who thought he had the election sewed up.

Dole senses the overconfidence in his camp and rightly warns against it. There are too many unknown quantities in this campaign for anyone to take it for granted.

The Bicentennial

It has been popular lately in some areas to attack the work or lack of work of the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission which was formed by mandates of the Congress and appointed by the President. In fact, the Senate standing committee has conducted a hearing into the progress of the commission.

Hopefully, the hearings will clear the air, and enable the commission to report in public forum what it has done and what it intends to do.

Criticism of the commission in itself is not necessarily destructive, because criticism means interest. The ARBC has had to work far too long in the dark, not knowing the real heartbeat of the public. Even Congress has not paid much attention to the work of the commission until recently.

Under President Nixon, who reformed the commission and appointed new members, ARBC has been moving slowly as is the nature of commissions. However, it already has succeeded in extending its influence into all of the states. It has obtained money from Congress to initiate programs and it has drawn hundreds of organizations into a network of planning and cooperation.

The Bicentennial discussions in this era could be expected to have ideological conflicts. The liberals who use any vehicle they can to gain attention have sought to have the celebration embrace all their social causes. There are those who live in states of the original 13 colonies who thought the celebration should concern only them and their heritage.

Some have pointed to the failure of Philadelphia to embrace a 1976 world fair. Actually, a Bicentennial fair would have concentrated too much public and private funding and activity in one community.

The commission has taken the position that the celebration must be nationwide, must involve all the people, and must reflect the memories, the dreams, the hopes and aspirations of all Americans. Despite the expected controversies, hundreds of programs are being developed across the country.

By the same token, it also is true that defeatism breeds apathy. Although the Bicentennial climax still is more than three years hence, constant carping and criticism for the sheer sake of criticism can destroy what must be a vigorous national introspection and a bid to the rest of the world to join us in a happy occasion.

In announcing plans recently to involve all Americans in the Bicentennial, President Nixon appropriately declared that it could serve to lift our eyes to goals for the next century.

If we are to meet the constructive challenge, the time has come to shift the Bicentennial program into high gear.

The Peace Signal

WASHINGTON — The mystery over the alleged chance to make peace in Vietnam early in 1969 is beginning to clear up. Henry Cabot Lodge, who at the time headed the American delegation to the Paris talks, says North Vietnam did not budge from its demand that the United States unilaterally withdraw from South Vietnam and depose of the Saigon government.

Mr. Lodge, who was appointed the chief American negotiator in January 1969, declares that Sargent Shriver — then Ambassador to France — never mentioned until last week that there was an opportunity offered by a change in North Vietnam's position. As a matter of fact, ever since the discussions started the United States government has always understood that Hanoi might make a settlement provided the Thieu regime were ousted from power in Saigon.

President Nixon certainly made a concession when he announced that he would agree to an arrangement whereby President Nguyen Van Thieu would resign if agreement was reached for a cease-fire and release of prisoners, with provision for an election in South Vietnam in which all political factions would participate. It was also indicated that there would be no peace unless a "political settlement" was included to assure the independence of South Vietnam, so that North Vietnam would not be permitted to take over.

W. Averell Harriman, who was President Johnson's chief delegate to the Paris talks, now says that President Thieu has had, in effect, a veto over the peace negotiations because he has insisted that the withdrawal of all our troops without any safeguards for maintenance of the rights of the South Vietnamese would leave the way open to the North Vietnamese to seize power.

South Vietnam, with American assistance, has built a big army and is gradually training an Air Force. The belief among military men here is that the South Vietnamese can defend their country in ground combat but are not yet ready to take care of themselves in air warfare. Meanwhile, the effort to get a peace agreement had drifted along, and the real issue has been who is going to control South Vietnam. If the existing Saigon government is forced out, the North Vietnamese will move in and the independence of the South will vanish.

So the whole question of a peace agreement is related to how much strength South Vietnam can exhibit when it comes to a "political settlement." What assistance could the United States offer if, after President Thieu resigns, the North Vietnamese move in and start to dominate all of Indo-China?

Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's advisor, has gone to Saigon to take a look at the situation there and talk with President Thieu. While more American ground troops are being withdrawn, it is believed that he is carrying assurances to the head of the Saigon government that the commitment to protect South Vietnam with air cover will continue whether or not Thieu moves out in favor of an "interim coalition regime."

There have been reports that on this trip Mr. Kissinger will discuss with President Thieu the possibility of setting a date for the latter's retirement so that negotiations of a "political settlement" can begin. What is essential, of course, is that a cease-fire be declared, with a group of neutral nations ready to supervise it. But the theory of many people in Congress is that release of the prisoners will relieve the United States of all responsibility and that, once all American forces have been pulled out, there is no further obligation to uphold the principle which the United States has emphasized — the "right of self-determination."

Whatever happened early in 1969 with respect to North Vietnam's willingness to make peace, the fact remains that, unless there is a definite understanding that the form of government which the South Vietnamese people have selected will be maintained and that the communists will not take it over, there will be no peace in Vietnam or in Southeast Asia. Lots of Americans assert that Vietnam is of no real importance to the United States, but they don't realize how the whole world situation can be affected if Communism is allowed to move into small countries and deprive them of their freedom.

Aftermath of Enemy's Bloodbath

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Historical parallels are dangerous. But the North Korean invasion of the South in 1950 and North Vietnam's Tet offensive may have something to tell us about the after-effects of Hanoi's current invasion and occupation of parts of South Vietnam.

The Communist occupation of major areas in South Korea in 1950 was so vicious, and the killing of teachers, village officials, police and other local leaders so widespread that the North Koreans to this day have been unable to set up a viable Communist underground in the South.

In that 1950 occupation, the Communist underground surfaced and became known to the citizens. With the retreat of the North Korean armies, the backbone of the Red underground also disappeared.

The anger of the South Koreans was increased by the action of the retreating northerners. Before leaving each town they were forced to give up, they would order the local citizens to dig long trenches. The civilian leaders of these towns and small villages — those who remained — would be forced to line up beside these trenches. They were shot and buried.

I have a picture left from those days. In this case the bloody dead lie sprawled by the trenches. The retreating Communists did not have time for burying the bodies.

In these killings, the retreating North Koreans attempted to destroy all civilian leadership — teachers, farm cooperative leaders, minor officials, policemen, professional men.

The situation after the massacres in Hue during Tet-1968 was similar. The Communists who occupied Hue systematically killed members of political parties, other leading citizens and those who might later expose them. The citizens of Hue remember the Communists with hatred to this day.

Although the Saigon government perhaps would win no popularity contests in Hue, the Communists are disliked and feared far more. My friends report that in the most difficult days after the Communists capture of Quang Tri, this spring, the men and women of Hue began to form civilian militia units to fight the invaders house-to-house and door-to-door. Some men sent their families away but stayed behind themselves.

If the Communists enter Hue again, they will find themselves faced by these citizen irregulars by night.

In several parts of occupied northern South Vietnam, reportedly the Communists are once again killing and kidnapping those who could provide leadership, those who protest and those with connections in Saigon.

If the Hue and Korean experiences have validity, the current terrorism will forge such hatred among the people of these occupied areas it will be exceedingly difficult for the Communists, if they are defeated in this round of the war, to rebuild their underground.

As this reporter knows from his own guerrilla days in Asia in World War II, no underground can exist for long without cooperation, at least from some groups within the local population. Once that cooperation is dead, the underground is finished.

Convention Capers

By ROBERT YOAKUM

MIAMI BEACH — It was true of the Democratic convention last month, and now it's true as delegates gather for the Republican convention: Security is tight, but talk is loose.

Republican rumors are already as rife as hijackers at the Miami airport. Here are some I've heard since my arrival:

1. "The average age of Republican delegates is 78."

False. The average age of performers at the Republican convention is 78. Art Linkletter, 60, James Stewart, 64, and John Wayne, 65, are referred to as "the kids" among other Republican entertainers.

2. "The Republicans are trying to dig up some scandal in Sargent Shriver's background."

False. It's a group of Democrats who are trying to get something on Shriver. Many Democrats who are trying to get something on Shriver. Many Democrats believe they can win only with Sen. Edward Kennedy on the ticket. Their reasoning is that if they can find a skeleton in Shriver's closet he will have to withdraw as the Democratic vice-presidential nominee. This would force Kennedy to run in his place in order to uphold the family's honor.

3. "The Republican convention was moved from San Diego to Miami Beach because of the ITT scandal and Life magazine's expose of efforts by the Nixon Administration to protect highly-placed San Diego friends of the President from criminal prosecution."

False. This rumor was probably started by Democrats. The truth is that the "California White House" near San Diego (where President Nixon was to have stayed after he cancelled his reservations at the ITT-owned Sheraton Hotel) developed plumbing trouble. So the President decided to use the "Florida White House" at Key Biscayne, which happens to be only a short drive from Miami Beach. (The "Washington White House" couldn't be used, having been turned over to election workers until November 7.)

Republican officials also realized that Miami Beach could accommodate several hundred more delegates' yachts.

4. "Martha Mitchell will be mistress of ceremonies for a gigantic Republican fund-raising telethon."

False. Such a telethon was scheduled some time ago but it's been cancelled. The official explanation for the cancellation was that the Republicans had all the money they needed.

5. "During the convention President Nixon will announce his agreement to debate the Democratic presidential nominee, Sen. George McGovern."

True. The President will also announce that affairs of state — including trips to Tanzania, Thailand, Togo, Tonga, Tunisia, Turkey, Trinidad and Tobago — will make it impossible to debate McGovern until early in 1973.

6. "The Republican National Committee will answer McGovern's questions about sources of $10 million raised by the Republicans after Congress passed the campaign fund disclosure law and before it went into effect."

True. The Committee will point out, however, that research assistance needed to dig out the names of contributors will not be available until early in 1973, due to high priority affairs of state.

7. "President Nixon will announce his intention to carry out platform promises made at the 1968 Republican convention."

False. Nixon, like most Presidents, feels he has done very well by ignoring his party platform.

8. "One of the surprises promised by Republican officials is a gigantic wooden donkey which will be wheeled into Convention Hall and presented to President Nixon by John Connally, head of 'Democrats for Nixon.'"

True. The handmade donkey is a gift from Greek shipowners who are admirers of Vice President Agnew as well as contributors to the Republican Party. Fifty Secret Service men will ride inside "to avoid repetition of an earlier unfortunate incident."

Editor, The Freeman:

George McGovern is starting to show his true colors.

Take his stand on the matter of the equal-time provision of the Federal Communications Act. He wants it suspended so he can debate with President Nixon at the expense of the Socialist Labor Party and other minor party candidates.

The effect of such suspension would be to relieve the licensed broadcasters from any obligation whatsoever to present minority party candidates on the publicly owned airwaves. They would not even be under any obligation to sell the Socialist Labor Party and other minor parties air time. That does NOT bother him.

He is just another politician who is out to con the people who sincerely want a change in the American social order to put him in the White House where he will be disposed and compelled to respond to the demands of the plutocracy.

As Louis Fisher, the working man candidate of the Socialist Labor Party put it: "If McGovern was truly a candidate of the people he would seek the expansion of the equal time provision. He would welcome fully publicized debates between all of the presidential candidates, thereby ensuring the American people the knowledge necessary for them to make an intelligent decision in the November election."

Residents Aiding Family

KINGSTON

Area residents are cooperating in a drive to aid a family of four made homeless as the result of a fire that destroyed their homes and all personal belongings in St. Remy last Sunday.

The DiMuccio family needs furniture, household items, clothing, food and funds, according to a spokesman at Fatum's Ambulance Service, 27 Clinton Avenue, this city, the drop-off point for donations for the homeless family.

"The family lost everything but a few things they had in two suitcases," the spokesman said. "Clothing size 12 is needed for a seven-year-old boy while the daughter, aged three needs clothing size 5."

Any donations from area residents may be left at the Clinton Avenue address.

THE GOSSIP COLUMN

ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: In U.S. politics it seems that all skeletons are dragged out of the closets, but the British appear more discreet. For instance, does anyone know why British Prime Minister Edward Heath is still a bachelor?—M.B., Paoli, Pa.

A: The British libel laws are tough, and not so much laundry gets washed out-of-doors. As for Ted Heath, an American author living in Britain has a book coming out this fall called "Heath and the Heathmen." Writer Andrew Roth, who got no cooperation from Heath or his relatives, tried to answer the intriguing question of why the PM is a bachelor. The writer furnished a U.S. psychiatrist with a complete dossier on Heath, but could not get any of the doctor's fascinating speculations past the libel lawyers. Most of this material had to be cut out of the book.

Q: How did former Democratic Chairman Larry O'Brien get bounced from Senator McGovern's camp and then suddenly rejoin the group to run McGovern's campaign for the Presidency?—E.P., Baltimore.

A: The McGovern staff was determined to dump O'Brien the minute George got the nomination. Frank Mankiewicz even put out rumors to the press that O'Brien wanted to stay but that Senator McGovern didn't want him. (Mankiewicz had been saying privately all along that O'Brien, who represents the establishment, would never have anything to do with the McGovern campaign.) When McGovern learned his staff people were making decisions for him, he was furious. According to political reporter Michael Kramer, the candidate went alone and personally to O'Brien and persuaded him to run the campaign — offering him total independence, salary and staff of his choice, and ANY government position O'Brien wants in a McGovern administration.

Q: I saw Raquel Welch on a TV show and she seemed much more relaxed. Why?—D.P., Boston.

A: Raquel decided to stop being uptight about everyone terming her a sex symbol when what she really wants is to be considered a good actress. Now Raquel wants to have fun making movies and not try to prove anything. For the first time since age 16 she is alone and independent (two marriages behind her.) Though at first she was scared, now she spends more time with her kids, enjoys the new men in her life and can laugh a lot. Since seeing a psychiatrist, Raquel has, as they say, gotten it all together.

Q: Who is Elizabeth Stevens and what does she have to do with Senator McGovern's run for the Presidency? I saw her name mentioned in a joking way in several stories out of Miami Beach.—J.P., Topeka, Kan.

A: Liz Stevens is the young blonde wife of American Film Institute head George Stevens Jr. (His father directed such movies as "Giant.") Mrs. Stevens comes from the well-connected Guest family right out of the Social Register. Her father is former Ambassador Raymond Guest. Mrs. Stevens is one of the powers behind McGovern's throne. She is included in top-level policy meetings and Washington is already talking about a possible important appointment for her should McGovern win.

Q: I read in a news magazine that on tour the Rolling Stones had a newsletter at each place they stopped listing their requirements backstage. Can you tell us any details?—W.L., San Francisco.

A: Yes, the Stones requested that American promoters supply them with towels and soap, saying "a clean group is a happy group." They asked for two bottles of scotch per show, two bottles of tequila with lemon quarters and salt, three bottles of chilled Liebfraumilch wine, one bottle of brandy, fresh fruit, cheese, brown bread, butter, cold meat, chicken legs, roast beef, tomatoes, pickles and Alka-Seltzer.

Suspect is Held in $100,000 Bail

By CARL GRAHAM

KERHONKSON
A burglary and rape suspect, reportedly clad only in his undershirt, was captured early Saturday morning after a manhunt involving State Police bloodhounds and a helicopter.

David Reid, 25, of 62nd Street, Philadelphia, Pa., was confined in the Ulster County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bail and charged with rape, assault, and two counts of first degree burglary.

Ellenville State Police received a call at 2:30 a.m.

reporting a burglary and assaults on occupants of a residence on Elizabeth Street. While they were investigating this complaint a second call was received, reporting that an intruder had entered another residence earlier that morning and had forcibly raped an elderly woman residing about a quarter mile from the Elizabeth Street residence.

According to police the assailant entered the first home, crept past the husband who was asleep on a couch, went to an upstairs bedroom, and raped the wife. He left after stealing the husband's wallet and cash.

The intruder entered the second home by cutting his way through a screen door. After rifling the woman's purse, he removed his clothing except for the undershirt and attempted to rape the woman, who had fallen asleep on a couch.

Interrupted by the woman's husband, who had been asleep in an upstairs bedroom, the assailant attacked the man with a knife, inflicting a shoulder wound that required 28 stitches to close. He also struck the man several times with his fists after knocking him, and then fled from the scene in his undershirt.

Lift behind where blue pants, a striped t-shirt, suede shoes and three sets of underpants, police said.

A massive search began before dawn under Captain K. S. Crouse of State Police Troop F headquarters in Middletown. Bloodhounds were brought from Troop K in Poughkeepsie at daybreak and put on the assailant's trail after being exposed to his clothing. The Troop K helicopter joined in the search at daybreak.

Reid was taken into custody nearby at 7:30 a.m. after an area resident saw him walking in a field and called police. Reid offered no resistance when arrested, police said.

He was taken to the county jail in Kingston after being arraigned before Town of Rochester Justice Harold Lipton of Kerhonkson.

Authorities in Philadelphia said that Reid had been released from Barbary State Hospital there a week ago after being confined for six years for grand larceny and statutory rape. He was on probation to the Philadelphia Adult Crimes Parole and Probation Department.

The black-haired, brown-eyed Reid reportedly came from Ellenville area Friday from Philadelphia, police said.

Ulster is Declared An Emergency Area

KINGSTON
Ulster County has been declared an emergency area by the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, Earl Butz. The Freeman has learned.

The announcement which came Friday makes emergency loans available to farmers at the low interest rate of five and one-eighth percent for relief of damages during and resulting from spring and early summer flooding and weather conditions.

The Secretariat designation has little or no bearing on whether or not a Presidential disaster declaration will be issued in the future, Jack Massaro, county supervisor for the Farmers Home Administration, told The Freeman.

Loans available under the emergency declaration may be used to cover crop damage, for the purchase of machinery or for repairs to buildings damaged during the flooding. They will also be available to cover cost of fall feed, spring planting and replacement of livestock, Massaro said.

Massaro noted that these loans will only be available to farmers, which is not the case if Ulster County is declared a disaster area by the President. There is still a definite possibility the county will get the disaster declaration, he added.

Were Ulster County to be declared a disaster area, farmers could secure loans with $2,500 as a direct grant.

Under the emergency declaration, loans will have to be repaid within a year. The amount of the loans will be based on the needs of the applicants and their repayment abilities, according to Massaro. No direct grants will be made.

County Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago recently wired Governor Rockefeller requesting that the county be included among those in the state designated as disaster areas as a result of damage inflicted by Hurricane Agnes.

The emergency declaration is, however, a direct result of efforts on the part of three local departments of the U.S. Department of Agriculture: the Farmers Home Administration, the Agriculture Division of the Cooperative Extension Service, according to Massaro.

Massaro also attributed the emergency declaration to results from articles carried by the local new media.

EAST KINGSTON
East Kingston volunteer firemen were unable to save a abandoned barn that burned to the ground Saturday afternoon just north of the Whittier tract on Route 32.

Chief Thomas Clausi led 20 firemen and three pieces of equipment to the empty barn, which was burning heavily when they arrived. Firemen set up a tanker relay and used 1½-inch hose lines in an attempt to save the structure, a part of the former Osterhoudt farm. Clausi said that all other buildings had been burned previously on the abandoned property and that the barn fire looked like the work of vandals.

Former Ellenville Youth Faces Charges

Following his arraignment, to Florida. He returned here recently.

Detective Sergeant George A. Sheeley of the village police department, arrested Fox on a warrant issued last February charging him with burglary third degree. The youth was free in custody of an attorney pending disposition of the charge, was taken in custody on Thursday charged with petit larceny.

Fox reportedly left the area following the break-in and went to Florida. He returned here recently.

Sheeley said that Allen Yerks, 19, of Ellenville, who has been cited in connection with the restaurant burglary and was free in custody of an attorney pending disposition of the charge, was taken in custody on Thursday charged with petit larceny.

Yerks allegedly snatched a purse belonging to Rosemary

Keener of this village, while she was shopping in a local market. The purse contained $17 and personal items, the sergeant said.

Sheeley reported that Yerks, a resident of Briggs Highway here, was arraigned before Justice Elias, who remanded him to jail in lieu of $1,000 bail pending a further court appearance.

Kingston Native Named To Head Department

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The proposed 20-year master plan for transportation in New York was described Saturday as the most immediate and urgent business before the State Transportation Department by the man newly named to head the department.

Gov. Rockefeller's office announced that career civil servant Raymond T. Schuler would take over as commissioner Sept. 6, replacing retired Gen. T. W. Parker who resigned unexpectedly last month.

"Our immediate plan is to continue the work we've been doing in the hearings of our statewide master plan, and to review the results of the hearings and to get on with completing the report to the governor on the master plan," Schuler said in a telephone interview.

"That is probably our most immediate and urgent business," he said.

Parker resigned the $42,475-a-year post days after the department announced its preliminary master plan that is now the subject of a series of public hearings throughout the state.

Unlike Parker, a career military man, Schuler is a career civil servant.

Schuler, 43, is a native of Kingston, a former Marine commissioner.

His education includes a degree in public administration at Syracuse University and graduate work at Syracuse's Maxwell School of Public Affairs.

Bailey Guidance Offices Schedule Monday Opening

KINGSTON
The guidance offices at the J. Watson Bailey Junior High School, the Myron J. Michael Junior High School and the M. Clifford Miller Junior High School will open Monday. Office hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Students who have moved into the area since the close of school in June and who plan to enter the 7th, 8th, or 9th grade must register at the guidance office in the school they will be attending. If there are any questions concerning the school in which a child should be enrolled, the Pupil Personnel Office, may be contacted for information.

All new students in the Kingston City School District who are planning to enter Kingston High School as transfer students in grades 10, 11, or 12 must report to the guidance office to register for the fall term. Any graduate who plans to return to high school in the fall for a post-graduate course must register prior to the opening of school. The guidance office in the high school will be open Monday; the hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

A new entrant to a junior high school or the senior high school must submit proof that he has been immunized against poliomyelitis, diphtheria, and measles.

Any parent who wishes to discuss his child's program prior to the opening of school, or any student who wishes to make an adjustment in his program, may do so by making an appointment at the guidance office. All adjustments in schedules must be made prior to the opening of school.

Decision Reserved

KINGSTON
County Judge Raymond J. Mino reserved decision Friday following an identification hearing in County Court in the case of William Dibble of Kingston who is charged with robbery, third degree.

First Assistant District Attorney Joseph J. Traficanti called one witness, Cornelius Salaga of Eddyville. There were no witnesses for the defense.

Dibble, who was represented by William Pretsch, is charged with alleged robbery of Salaga's grocery store, March 9 in Eddyville.

KINGSTON

Twelve counts of third degree burglary pending against Douglas Perry, 23, of Route 4, Saugerties, since June 12, have been dismissed by City Judge Hubert A. Richter because of insufficient evidence and lack of corroboration.

The charges were dismissed in City Court on Friday, when Judge Richter informed Assistant District Attorney John T. Dall Vechia, that in the event the district attorney's office should have new evidence, the case could be presented to the grand jury.

However, two counts of endangering the welfare of two minor boys, and charges of sexual abuse involving the minors, have been put over for hearing on Aug. 23 in City Court. The boys had been allegedly involved in the burglaries charged to Perry.

John J. Schick was attorney for Perry, and had made several appearances at a hearing held before Judge Richter.

Dutchess Man Killed in Auto Mishap

CHELSEA, N.Y. (UPI) — A Wappingers Falls man was charged with driving while intoxicated, not having insurance, driving with a revoked license and having an unregistered motor vehicle Saturday following an accident which killed his passenger near here.

Dutchess County sheriff's deputies said George W. Decker, 41, was held in lieu of $1,500 bail following arraignment on the charges.

Jack Reidy, 36, also of Wappingers Falls, was killed Friday night when Decker's auto ran off River Road and crashed into a tree, authorities said.

Both men lived on Skytop Drive.

KINGSTON

Detectives continued investigation of a burglary at Scholar's T. V. and Appliance store at 661 Broadway that netted an undetermined number of Zenith color television sets.

According to police the company's garage was entered by prying a side window of the building with a tire iron that was found on the ground under the window on Friday. The television sets were loaded on a truck owned by Scholar's and carted away.

Another van truck in the next bay of the garage was not taken, but a new television set was found loaded on the vehicle and another was on the floor nearby. The stolen truck later was found near the Rondout Gardens, with the loot missing.

Joseph Scholar told detectives that the television sets had been delivered on Thursday and they had not been removed from the crates.

Youth Shot, Is Critical

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — Doctors at St. Francis Hospital looked at X-rays of 13-year-old Jeffrey Daniels Saturday and suddenly realized that the boy's skull had not been fractured in a fall from a tree as they had thought. Instead, they saw a bullet lodged in his head.

Police answering a report that a boy had fallen from a tree in the city's Pulaski Park Friday found him and rushed him to the hospital, where X-rays were made.

When the X-rays were examined Saturday and the bullet was discovered, surgery was performed to remove it.

The boy was listed in critical condition after the operation.

Police said they found a .22-caliber rifle near the scene of the shooting but there have been no arrests made yet in the incident.

Davis Case: Various Views

PUCKER PULLS OUT — Politicians, we've observed over the years, generally fall into two categories: skeptics and cynics, with the latter trait being more prevalent among the veterans of the game. The evolution from skepticism to cynicism is something like aging; after a time the politician trusts no one and believes nothing he hears.

In analyzing the always suspect motives of their colleagues, politicians usually start from what they figure is the end result and then work backward.

The Pucker Davis case is a classic example of the "logical," if somewhat cynical thinking political process.

Davis, as most will recall, was nominated by the Democrats and the Conservatives on Aug. 8 to run against Harry Kapreilian for county legislature this year. Davis was by no means the first choice of his party but he campaigned for it and his assurances that he had the Conservative endorsement clinched it. And, after securing those nominations, Davis gave every indication that he would campaign hard for election. Most observers gave Davis, with his Conservative backing, a good chance of beating Kapreilian; in some quarters, Davis was a solid favorite.

On Monday afternoon, Davis walked into Board of Election offices and declined the Democratic nomination. He gave several reasons: bad health, the loss of the Conservative nomination because the Conservatives didn't file in time and his being caught in the Democratic bind between the McGovern forces and the regulars.

The general public, no doubt, accepted Davis' reasons and probably wished him a speedy recovery. The people on the inside, the Democratic politicians, looked at it entirely differently. (Republican's we've talked to seem to take Davis' reasons on face value.)

In analyzing the motives of their colleagues, politicians usually start from what they figure is the end result and then work backward. The end result of Davis' withdrawal and the loss of the Conservative nomination for anyone else, most agree, is to elect Harry Kapreilian. Gene Perry, the man who replaced Davis on the Democratic ticket, will be running for the exercise.

Democrats are working on two basic assumptions for Davis' pullout: Either the Conservatives did it to Davis for some future political consideration from the Republicans; or Davis did it for himself for some future consideration from the Republicans. It is "logical," Democrats say, to assume that since the Republicans were the beneficiaries of Davis' withdrawal they will in time make payment.

Politics can be a very cynical business.

THE OLD HALL — It now looks like the Common Council will refuse to designate the old city hall on Broadway as an historic landmark, thus clearing the way for Kingston Hospital's takeover and demolition of same.

Most of the "heavyweights" in city government (mayor, alderman-at-large, etc.) are in favor of the takeover for the obvious reasons: the old building is shot, they say, and the hospital's expansion plans would be a distinct asset to the community.

We'd guess though that most city officials, with the exception perhaps of Pete Mancuso, who was opposed to building a new city hall, would just as soon like to see the old building leveled. With the building standing, there's always the possibility, though remote, that some private party would come in, fix it up and occupy it. That might leave the city fathers open to questions as to why they spent $972,000 on a new building downtown.

SPEAKING OF THE NEW BUILDING, city officials are beginning to get numerous questions from the public on when the big move is going to take place. The contract date for completion was Jan. 22 and as long ago as March the city was notified by its architect that the building was complete enough to be occupied.

Mayor Koenig is still sticking with his "all or nothing" position, demanding that the building be finished right to the last brush stroke before he'll move in. Reports indicate that could be sometime in September . . . of 1972, of course.

London's Youth Center, Varsity Shop...New Plans

KINGSTON the proprietors of the Youth Center and Varsity Shop on North Front Street in Kingston, a household word in the many Ulster County homes inhabited by children and young adults, is planning a decidedly different and huge expansion by keeping its two present locations and adding a third.

Stanley and Arthur London, the proprietors of the Youth Center and Varsity Shop on North Front Street in Kingston, a household word in the many Ulster County homes inhabited by children and young adults, is planning a decidedly different and huge expansion by keeping its two present locations and adding a third.

The acquisition of the 10,000 square foot store will mean a shift in and large additions to the merchandise. Planned for the new store which will be decorated in old English, western and colonial decor are clothes for everyone from 19 to 50 while the North Front Street location will remain the center for infant, children, pre-teen and junior clothes. Aiming at a middle price range, London's anticipates an extensive stock of everything from jumpers to jeans to mens sports jackets. Having a separate and new mens' department is a part of the expansion, Stanley said, explaining that it will be located in the new store with misses and women's and sophisticated junior clothes. There will be an extensive stock of polo shirts, mens' shirts, and "rough" clothes as well "a prep shop" for young men which will carry dress pants, jackets, shirts and sportswear. This shop is planned to separate the buying trends of the 13 to 16 year old from his "kid brother."

London's plans to stock as many as 4,000 jeans at a time, include some outerwear in the inventory and include women's half sizes in dresses and coats. Designers are presently working on remodeling the store to include carpeting throughout, air conditioning and perhaps a new lighting system. Each shop within the huge new store will be decorated with a different motif. The North Front Street location will keep the London Youth Center name but a new name is being considered for the Wall Street location and Stanley said he is welcoming suggestions from anyone. Plans call for his managing the new store while his brother, Arthur, the present manager of the Saugerties Department Store will assume the managerial position at the North Front Street locale. A new manager will be appointed to take on the Saugerties post. Stanley said he hopes plans will be finalized by Sept. 1 and that the new store will be open by Nov. 1.

L & M AUTO . . . EXPANSION PLANNED

L&M...Kingston's Auto Hospital

KINGSTON L & M Auto Parts on Kingston's East Strand is planning a large expansion after less than four years of operation and intends to be Kingston's first auto hospital "at rates the average man can afford."

Plans call for a big new building for storage and work areas to handle their wholesale and retail auto part business. A unique operation, it began with the exporting of electrical units to Venezuela and then developed into a motor vehicle dismantling business. Growing quickly, the business is now operated with the use of five teletype lines enabling the two young men to buy and sell auto parts in most of the eastern states. A cross country line is envisioned eventually.

Gersh and Schildhorn's new "car care center" also fronts on a railroad siding and the Rondout Creek. The huge inventory includes everything from hub caps to complete rear or front ends of cars (foreign and domestic) and trucks. There are as many as 1,000 car doors in stock as well as hundreds of bumpers, fenders and other parts. All are housed indoors where employees can work in comfort during the winter months. The current staff includes, in addition to the two owners, two office employees, four yardmen, two drivers and three salesmen. The company also owns property at 213 and 215 East Strand for customer parking. Business expansion is also evidenced in the growth of the number of vehicles used to conduct the business. From a one rack truck operation, it has developed into a fleet of three tow trucks, three pickup trucks, three car carriers and two cranes. All parts are delivered upon request.

Mini Truck... ...New Trend

PONTIAC, MICH. A trend toward mini-skirted truck drivers is helping accelerate truck sales to their highest level in history, according to a top General Motors official.

Martin J. Caserio, GM vice president and general manager of GMC Truck & Coach Division, explains that women are driving light-duty trucks to the beauty parlors, shopping centers and little league ball parks, as well as for hauling cargo.

"Housewives are ordering pickups, vans, suburbans and other light trucks with air conditioning, bucket seats, AM-FM radios, carpeting and color-coordinated interiors — and they are parking them in the second spot in a two-car garage," he points out.

"In addition, with leisure-time activity at a peak, families want a pickup with a slide-on camper, a sporty utility truck for off-the-road purposes, a van outfitted as a small motor home, or a larger motor home mounted on a modified truck chassis," Caserio reports.

With trucks becoming increasingly prominent in American life-styles, he estimates that 15 to 17 per cent of U.S. households own trucks.

A surge in the use of trucks for personal transportation is a major factor in the mushrooming truck market which is headed for a record 2.5 million sales, including imports, this year, Caserio says. The existing annual sales peak is 2.1 million set only last year.

Accounting for about 85 per cent of the total truck market, light-duty sales exceeded 1.1 million in the first six months of 1972, a 40 per cent increase over last year's rate.

A breed apart from the lights are trucks with gross vehicle weight ratings over 14,000 pounds and classified as medium or heavy-duty.

"Activity in these weight groups serves as a sound barometer of the nation's economic climate since they are used primarily as tools of industry and commerce," Caserio emphasizes. Although their share of the overall market is relatively small, he points out that the mediums and heavies are also selling at record levels with sales in the first-half approximating 190,000 units, 19 per cent above the same six months of 1971.

Caserio anticipates continued truck growth through the 1970s. He predicts annual sales will reach 3 million by 1980, a 50 per cent growth rate for the decade. He looks for automobile sales to increase about one-third over the same span.

Caserio's confidence in the truck outlook is supported by GMC Truck's biggest expansion program in history, increasing the division's facilities by 50 per cent.

The Jerry Martin Pontiac Inc., 708 Broadway, is the Kingston, N.Y. area dealership for Pontiac.

Camping Area Is Scheduled

SAUGERTIES

Plans are in progress for the construction of a new tent and trailer camp area in Saugerties under a Kamp Grounds of America franchise.

The new 75-site facility is owned by Mrs. and Mrs. Nicholas Moretti who recently moved into the 1797 house located on the 50-acre former farm property on Route 212 west of Blue Mountain Road.

The Moretti's who come from Bergen County, New Jersey, hope to open the facility in May of 1973. It will feature an 82-foot building which will be used for a general store, laundromat, recreation lounge and hot showers and bathing facilities.

A two-acre pond for boating and trout fishing graces the area and will be equipped with rowboats and paddle boats. An approximate 40 by 60-foot site is planned for each camper and picnic tables and barbecue pits will be installed.

Engineers are presently laying out sewage and septic systems. The KOA firm headquarters is located in Billings, Montana with camps throughout the country.

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Coincident with the announcement, Robert E. Brown, president of the company, also announced completion of a new 6,300 sq. ft. warehouse facility in Mexico, N.Y. and introduction of a new delicatessen style bean pack already in distribution here.

Predict Sales 'Highest Ever'

CONSHOHOCKEN, PA. — Evans Products Company's president and chief operating officer predicted that home sales would be the highest in the company's history.

Sheldon I. Kaplan told an estimated 1,000 persons here that the company's homes group expects to produce more than 9,000 homes this year, up 44 per cent from the 6,213 homes it produced in 1971.

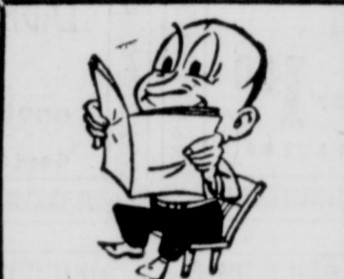

Kaplan flew here from Evans' Portland, Ore. headquarters to address dedication ceremonies marking completion of a $3 million expansion program that more than doubles the home-producing capacity of Ridge Homes, a division of the Evans' home group. Ridge expects to deliver 3,200 homes this year, compared with last year's 2,330 units.

The company's homes group is the nation's largest producer of pre-cut, non-tract, custom-designed homes and the fifth largest builder of single-family dwellings.

The group accounted for 26 per cent of the Evans' operating earnings last year. More than 50 per cent of the company's operating earnings are derived from its home sales and building materials retailing activities.

Kaplan said the company expects to realize a net earnings increase of more than 20 per cent per common share in 1972. Revenues will exceed $925 million.

Ridge is the largest home manufacturer east of the Mississippi, distributing its products through more than 100

High School Football '72 ... It's Only the Beginning

KINGSTON

It no longer makes any sense to look at the calendar when it comes to sports.

Here it is the height of summer and the high school kids will be out playing football this week. That's right ... when Wednesday morning rolls around the preliminary practice sessions will begin, just conditioning mind you, but the beginning nonetheless.

Football is something special to most people. It seems to draw a hidden spark that grows to a full-size flame by the first game and either increases or diminishes as the weeks progress in direct proportion to their team's success.

The Ulster County high school football fan is no different. Quite the contrary, there may not be a more rabid breed in this part of the state.

Why? Many reasons: the love of the game, the tie with their old school, the desire to see their sons do well, just to name a few.

And as the spark grows in the fan so does it motivate the team. That's great, say the coaches, because that extra desire needed to play a game is driven in by the knowledge that family and friends are watching. The coach need only worry about getting them in shape and teaching them the plays.

That's what starts on Wednesday. No fires yet, just unit matches await a few squirts of gasoline.

The 1972 season will mark the entrance of Kingston into the Dutchess County Scholastic League after years of toil in the DUSO and a successful season as an independent.

Football '72 will finally see UCA, coaches, players, and fans, breathe a most welcome sigh of relief what with the long-awaited graduation of the county's two most dominant players Ron and Perry Monroe of Highland. And they may not even have to worry about the rest of the Highlanders if that district's residents turn down the athletic budget in Thursday's referendum.

Those two developments are the most interesting as we come close to the first kick-off. It all begins Wednesday. Didn't last season just end?

Namath Faces Giants

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Joe Namath will face the New York Giants for the first time since 1969 Sunday when the New York Jets and Giants meet in an exhibition game Sunday at Yale Bowl.

And Jets fans are hoping the ace quarterback will have a better day than he did last week when he completed only three of 14 passes in loss to Pittsburgh last week. The Jets are 1-1 in exhibition play while the Giants are 0-2.

Namath hit 14 of 15 passes for three touchdowns in 1969 in the first exhibition meeting of the two clubs. He then was on the sidelines as the Jets won in 1971 and the Giants won in 1970 and also last year in the only National Football League regular-season game between the two teams.

Randy Johnson will start at quarterback for the Giants in place of the departed Fran Tarkenton.

Both clubs are in good physical condition. Running back Ron Johnson, like Randy injured two weeks ago, is set to return as is running back Charlie Evans and the only Giants not expected to play are wide receiver Coleman Zeno and defensive back Scott Eaton.

Right guard Dave Herman is expected to see his first action of the year for the Jets and also expected to play are the club's two top draft choices, wide receiver Jerome Barkum of Jackson State and linebacker Mike Taylor of Michigan. Barkum signed a contract just this week while Taylor has been recovering from knee injuries suffered in the College All-Star Game.

Giants Slipping

TOKYO, Aug. 17 (UPI)—The Yomiuri Giants, the most popular baseball team in Japan, appear to be in trouble in their quest to capture the Central professional league pennant for the eighth straight year.

One year ago, the Giants were in first place, 11 games ahead of the second place Chunichi Dragons. Lately, they have been in second place, behind the Hanshin Tigers of Osaka.

One reason for the second place position of the Giants as of Aug. 17 was that their batting punch of first baseman Sadaharu Oh and third baseman Shigeo Nagashima has deteriorated. To Japanese ball fans, Oh and Nagashima are what Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig have been to American fans.

Nagashima, 35, who won the Central league batting crown last year for the sixth time, was batting only .278 with 22 homers. Oh, 31, the Central league's home run king since 1963 with 39 last year, was batting only .272 with 27 homers.

The Giants are in second place largely because they have been beaten 13 times and won only seven in 20 games thus far with the Taiyo Whales, who were in third place, 4 1/2 games behind of the Tigers.

QUARRYVILLE

Ulster County trapshooting buffs figure the lad can't miss Bob Schmedake, one of the most knowledgeable buffs in the business predicts a bright future. But 15-year-old Tom Abate is taking his new-found place in the trapshooting sun in good stride.

"Sure, I guess it's the dream of every trapshooter to make it to Vandalia," said young Tom in a recent interview. It's the ultimate in any man's career, but right now I'm concentrating on improving my game."

The handsome youngster who will be playing junior varsity football at Saugerties High this fall recently captured the Sub-Junior Championship in traps at the prestigious New York State Trapshooting Championships at Brooks Gun Club in Rochester. Earlier, he had won fourth place in the Eastern Zone Shoot in Ontario, Canada. In taking the Sub-Junior title, he cracked 88 out of 100 targets.

Young Tom has been a member of the Ridge Runners Rod and Gun Club on the Woodstock-Saugerties Road for the past three years. He is currently leading the Junior Division of the Ulster County Trapshoot Circuit with a .890 average and has six "25 straight" rounds to his credit. He also is credited with a score of 49 in 50 targets.

His father, Frank Abate, is also an accomplished shooter, making Tom a bit of a chip off the old block. Senior Abate is currently tied for the handicapped honors in the county circuit.

Tom runs track in addition to football with the Sawyers, but plans to concentrate on his shooting. "I don't know whether I want to make a career of it," he says. "That decision will come later."

Dianna Milano First Woman Derby Entrant

KINGSTON

Dianna Milano of Hurley, the first woman entry in Kingston's first Auto Demolition Derby on Saturday, Aug. 26 at Dietz Stadium, is not unlike the other 31 entries who have filed to date. She will be doing it strictly for kicks.

What possessed you to get involved in a demolition derby against men?

I just thought it will be a lot of fun," says the Benedictine Hospital technician. I've fooled around cars for a long time and I raced once in a sport car division at Lebanon Valley ... just once."

Dianna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Milano of Hurley, will be surrounded by a field of amateurs in the body-busting shindig.

"There will be no pros in the field," says Pete Grant, local contact man for the Stoney Roberts troupe which will conduct the local derby. "We screen the field very carefully and pros are out. This will be an all-amateur field and should be a lot of fun." And, of course, the ultimate survivor receives first prize of $300 in cash.

Up-to-date entries:

Dan Kelly, Len Gokey, Don Fisher, Kingston; Tim Farrell, Port Ewen; Walter Wright, Lomontville; Richard Judson, West Hurley; Dianna Milano, Hurley; Tom Tintle, Shandaken; Larry Scarth, Joe Schiavone, Wayne Sickler, Lake Katrine.

Other Kingston entries include: Gordie Hall, Steve Berardi, Harold Lemister, Ted DeGraff, Paul Fisher, Jim Massa, Joseph Rougier, Skie DeGraff, David Greenberg, Willis Wilber, Dave Teague. Also, Frank Naccarato, G. Slim Hall, Mike Andrews, Bill Liese, Jim Craig, Art Tyler, Jack Majewski, Rich Cantwell, Robert Hoffman and Frank Bell.

Entry blanks are still available at Jim's Atlantic Station on the East Chester Street By-Pass. The field is limited to 50 cars.

Don Larsen's Perfect Game Top Feat in World Series

NEW YORK (UPI) —

Don Larsen's perfect game for the first game of the 1968 New York Yankees against the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1956 has been selected as the "Greatest Game in World Series" history by a Police Gazette panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

In recognition of the unique feat, achieved by Larsen on Oct. 8, 1956, Larsen will be presented with an award by Nat K. Perlow, editor of the Police Gazette, during World Series ceremonies next October.

The Police Gazette presented a similar award to Johnny (Double No Hit) Vander Meer in 1971 after a panel selected his two consecutive no-hitters in 1938 as the top sports feat of the century.

In making the announcement by the Yankees from the six greatest World Series deal prior to the 1955 season, feats voted by the panel were 1. He also pitched for the Chicago White Sox, Kansas City Athletics, Houston Astros, San Francisco Giants, Orioles and record 17-strikeout performance Chicago Cubs before retiring in his confrontation with 31-1967.

Larsen pitched his perfect game, only no-hitter in World Series history, in the fifth game of a series between the Yankees and the Dodgers. Working with a no-windup delivery, which he developed late in the season, Larsen retired 27 consecutive batters on a total of 97 pitches.

It's Byman Again In Doral Tourney

KINGSTON

The legend of Bobby Byman, the 16-year-old former Wiltwyck Country Club boy phenom, continues to grow. His latest accomplishment is winning the Doral Amateur Invitational title in competition against some of the greatest amateurs in the country at the plush Doral Golf and Country Club in Florida. Bobby fired rounds of 74, 73, 73-220 to win the coveted title by a three-stroke margin.

The win came in the wake of his qualifying for the United States Open at Pebble Beach. Topping that off, he fired a 36-hole 74-67-141 to lead south-western U.S. qualifiers for the U.S. Amateur later this month at Charlotte, North Carolina.

As 1972 United States Junior Champion, Bobby still had to go through the rigors of the Amateur qualifier and came through in a breeze.

Colleges across the country are vying against each other for Byman's services. And his phenomenal 3.96 scholastic average enables him to walk through the front door of any major university or college in the country — strictly on merit.

Among the schools that have contacted Byman to date are New Mexico State, Columbia, Yale, Wake Forest, Brigham Young, Oklahoma and Houston, one of the biggies in the golf field.

Bobby's sister, Mrs. Dennis Bliden of Ellenville, appeared sure about one thing — Bobby will not be going to Houston.

Twaalfskill in Squeaker Over Rondout Team, 35-34

The Twaalfskill Club swingers posted a 35-34 squeaker victory over host Rondout Pool, Golf and Tennis Association in the first inter-club match ever for the Rondout team.

In top matches of the day, J. Michael Bruhn, the golf chairman at Rondout, edged former Twaalfskill champion, Form Coughlin, 2-1. Walter Thiel, the Rondout pro, tripped Alex Gerlak of Twaalfskill by the same margin.

Coughlin defeated Mike Mangi, 2 1/4-1 and teamed with Dr. Douw Meyers for a 2-1 best ball win over Mangi and Mike Scudder, who turned back Dr. Meyers, 2-1.

The scores: Form Coughlin (T) 2 1/4; Mike Mangi (R) 1 1/4; Mike Scudder (R) 2; Dr. Douw Meyers (T) 1; BB-Coughlin-Meyers (T) 1; BB-Coughlin-Meyers (R) 0; Mickey Gorman (R) 2; Tom Glynn (T) 1; BB-Merrill-Glynn (1 1/4); Gorman - Crispell (1 1/4); Dave Hoffman (T) 2; Bob Elston (R) 1; Stirling Potter (T) 3; Ed Roth (R) 0; BB-Hoffman-Potter 3.

Bob Bechtold (T) 2 1/4; Mike Loughran (R) 1 1/4; Rich Murphy (R) 3; Art Larsen (T) 0; BB-

Bird Shot In American golfing parlance, scoring two-under-par on a given hole is called an "eagle." In British circles, however, the feat is still referred to as an "Albatross."

Wiltwyck Juniors Capture Sixth Title

KINGSTON Classic and there is no relief of victory in the ninth and final match of the season over their home layout, enabled them to capture their sixth title in the seven-year history of the junior circuit by a record-shattering 117 strokes.

PERENNIAL CHAMPIONS: Coach Tony Maneen (L) and members of Wiltwyck Country Club's six-time Mid-Hudson Junior Golf Classic champions, who won this year by a record 117-stroke margin. Players (L-R) Randy Spiesman, Kyle Murray, Bill Reilly Jr., A.J. Maneen, Mark Brown. (Freeman photo by Haines)

And every one of the Wiltwyck players will be returning for the 1973 season, including A.J. Maneen, who won seasonal low gross honors with an average of 80.2 for his five best rounds and placed second in best low net with 72.3, one tenth of a stroke behind the leader, Chuck Snyder of Red Hook.

A.J. shaded teammate Seth Meyer by just two shots for the low gross title.

Wiltwyck finished the season with a nine-match gross of 2695. Catskill was runnerup with 2812. In final round action, Wiltwyck posted 327, Catskill 362, Red Hook 365, Twaalfskill 369, Woodstock 382, Stone Dock 383, and Sawyerkill 402. Columbia and Winding Brook did not complete the season.

Mark Brown and Seth Meyer tied with 81s for Wiltwyck in the finale. A.J. Maneen carded 82 and Randy Spiesman 83. Brown shot 42-39-81; Meyer 44-37-81; A.J. Maneen 40-42-82; and Spiesman 42-41-83.

Brown (42-39) and Meyer (44-37) tied for low gross honors with 81 in the final match. Mike Dulin of Twaalfskill posted 42-40-82; Randy Spiesman, 42-41-83; and Joe Demski, Columbia, 43-43-86.

A.J. Maneen (82.9) tied with Billy Brush (100-27) of Stone Dock for low net honors with 73s. Three players shared a tie at 74-Mark Brown, 81-7; Mike Dulin, Twaalfskill, 82-8-74; Randy Spiesman, 83-9.

Wiltwyck Country Club hosted the seasonal awards luncheon following the match. Werner Kollin, Mid-Hudson Classic president, and M. Leslie Denning of Woodstock, tournament director, presided. Tony Maneen, coach of the Wiltwyck team, accepted the championship trophy.

Charles J. Tiano, Freeman Sports Editor, presented the trophy in his name to Chuck Snyder of Red Hook for winning low net honors during the season. Mark Tannenbaum of Catskill received a trophy as the most improved player over a two-year span. Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. Alex Gerlak of Twaalfskill; Mr. and Mrs. A.J. DeLisio of Woodstock; Nancy Kollin, the newly-crowned Ulster County Women's champion and area pro — Bill Reilly, Wiltwyck; Bill Merrill Jr., Stone Dock; Jim Hutchins of Woodstock and Jerry La Vergne, Catskill.

Red Hook Swimmers Finish With 10-0 Mark

RED HOOK silver and bronze medals. The all-day program will begin with time trials at 10 a.m. and conclude with an awards ceremony at 6:30 p.m. The stroke sequence for the final afternoon events will be: freestyle, backstroke, breaststroke, butterfly, individual medley and freestyle relays. Racers will be seeded in lanes 3, 4, 2, 5, 1 and 6 according to speed in the time trials. Scoring is on a 7, 5, 4, 3, 2 and 1 basis, double for relays.

Red Hook's tenth win was marked by 41 firsts in 55 events and paced by five triple winners, Denise Zimmerman, Kelly Mosher, Doug Theberge, Mike Mosher and Dave Martin each recorded a trio of wins as five pool records fell during the meet.

Ann Hoch broke records in the 12-and-under freestyle and individual medley, and the girls freestyle events and increased relay races will receive gold, silver and bronze medals.

Competitors ranking behind 53 Hyde Park are Pawling at 43, Marlboro at 35, Salisbury at 35 and Beekman at 0-9. Team trophies will be awarded for the first three places with individual trophies also presented to the top three in each event and medals for fourth through sixth. Winners in relay races will receive gold, silver and bronze medals. Barbara Skiba and Ann Hoch shattered the former 200 mark with a 2:12 minute time. Dave Martin shaved three and a half seconds off his former mark in the 12-and-under 100 yard individual medley, and the 12-and-under freestyle relay team of Martin Higgins, Dave Martin, Chris O'Connor and Mike Gibbs set a new record of 2:08.4.

Marlboro's David Foster, a triple winner, was the lone bright spot for the losers, taking first in the 100 yard freestyle, individual medley and 50 yard butterfly.

Red Hook girls grabbed 23 firsts and their teammates 17, and shared a win in the 8-and-under relays. The winners jumped off to a 73-17 lead after freestyle events and increased the margin 142-38 in backstroke, 187-63 in butterfly, 243-96 in breaststroke, 297-114 in individual medley, and wrapped up the meet with seven of nine freestyle relays.

Arlene's Waiting Game

SAUGERTIES squarely upon the Mahogany Ridge team.

By beating Eveready Beverages, 15-5, Orville and Arlene's completed the regular season with a 10-4 mark, one-half game behind the Ridgemen. Mahogany's final game was to be against the Fire Department. A Ridge win would mean the pennant. A loss would force a playoff.

Buster Buel and Frank Kelsch each drove in three runs for Orville. Buel turned the trick with a single and triple. Kelsch homered with two men aboard. Other big hitters were John Freight with a pair of singles and a double, and Bill Fischer with a single and home run.

Al Goodwin cracked two singles and a double to up his league leading average to .610.

Imperati Paces Mixer Andy Imperati rolled 246-619 to lead Wednesday Night Mixer Bowlers. Myrtle Post's 200-531 led the distaff side. Imp's Roofing rolled high team scores of 730 and 2035.

The Gallup Poll

Democrats Take Heart...Registration Is Up

By GEORGE GALLUP

Copyright, 1972

Field Enterprises, Inc.

PRINCETON, N. J. — As the McGovern forces begin their major registration drive, Democrats can take encouragement from the fact that, for the first time since the mid-thirties when Gallup registration measurements were first undertaken, as high a percentage of Democrats as Republicans are registered to vote.

In the latest Gallup Poll registration audit, based on in-person interviews with 4,149 adults, 18 and older, during the months of June, July and August, 80 per cent of both Democrats and Republicans say they are registered to vote in the forthcoming presidential election.

Driving Dividends

A comparable study, conducted during the first three months of the current year, found Republicans leading in the registration battle, 80 per cent to 72 per cent. At approximately this time in the last presidential year, 1968, Republicans led Democrats 84 per cent to 76 per cent.

Significance for Democrats
The significance of the current figures for the Democrats lies in the fact that Republicans in the past have counted on higher registration among their ranks to help offset the GOP's minority status.

The task of Democratic strategists now will be to get as high a turnout as possible among registered voters, since Democratic turnout in presidential elections has been traditionally lower than that of Republicans.

An important factor in the success of the Democrats in their registration efforts since the beginning of the year is the sharp increase in registration among non-whites, particularly those living in the South. For the first time in polling history, as high a proportion of non-whites as whites say they are registered. While the national figure for all adults has increased only four points since the study earlier this year — from 71 per cent to 75 per cent — the figure for non-whites nationwide has increased 8 percentage points — from 66 per cent to 74 per cent. The most dramatic increase in registration is recorded among non-whites in the South.

Registration Also Up Among Young Adults

Registration has increased more sharply among young adults, under 30 years of age, than among adults 30 and older. This trend is also encouraging since the youth vote is considered to be the core vote by the McGovern forces and the major focus of their get-out-the-vote drive.

In the early 1972 survey data, a total of 47 per cent of young adults indicated they were registered to vote. In the latest survey, the percentage has risen to 54 per cent. One factor in the increased registration among young people may be the Supreme Court ruling in March which overturned a Tennessee residence requirement. This ruling states that it is unconstitutional to deny anyone the vote simply because he has not resided in a place for a minimum length of time. This, combined with a number of state court rulings, could serve to enfranchise an additional estimated five to eight million young adults. One of the reasons why so few young citizens have registered and voted in the past has been their frequent change of residence.

Registration Deadlines

Twenty-seven states have final registration deadlines on or before October 9, including such key, populous states as New York, Texas, California, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Michigan. A substantial part of any registration effort must therefore be completed within the next two months.

The strategy of the McGovern forces likely will be to make an all-out effort in the next few weeks in those precincts which have voted heavily Democratic in previous national elections. Particular attention will likely be given those precincts with a high proportion of non-whites, Jews and lower-income whites, groups among whom McGovern scores best against Nixon in the most recent trial heats.

The following table shows the registration levels in groups which normally vote Democratic, as well as those which tend to lean toward the GOP in presidential elections. The early 1972 results (based on three surveys, Jan.-March, combined) are compared with the latest results (based on three surveys, June-August, combined):

This question was asked: Is your name now recorded in the voter registration book in the election precinct or election district where you now live?

For the early 1972 results, a total of 4,567 persons, 18 years of age and older, were interviewed during the period January-March. For the latest results, a total of 4,149 persons, 18 and older, were interviewed during the period June-August. Gallup registration data based on the survey question above, have been found in previous years to be much the same as Census Bureau figures based on survey data obtained in their Current Population Survey. For example, Gallup survey data on the per cent registered among those of voting age in November, 1968, was within one percentage point of the Census estimate based on their regular sample surveys.

Three Women On Ballot

EAST BRUNSWICK, N.J. (UPI)—Anyone in New Brunswick who doesn't want to vote for a woman for mayor Nov. 7 can just stay home. There are three women candidates for the job. No men.

"All those people, men and women, who under ordinary circumstances would not vote for a woman will have to pick from one of the three," said Mrs. Eva Shapiro, the Republican candidate.

"That is an advantage, allowing the candidates to focus more on the issues rather than 'red herrings'—such as being women."

Like Mrs. Shapiro, Democratic candidate Jean Walling and independent Emily Alman agree that the main issue in this middleclass township of 30,000 concerns the community's living conditions and that women are best fit to deal with them.

"Women live much more in and with the community," Mrs. Walling said. Since the men commute outside the town to their jobs each day, they are not as familiar with or involved in the fabric of the community, she contends. Thus women are more sensitive to community needs and problems.

"It's not a case of Women's Lib, but a using of talent of all people the best possible way," added Mrs. Walling.

All three women speak of the need to upgrade the "quality of life" in the community, which sits in the heart of New Jersey's industrial belt. Each is a veteran of battles against encroachments on that quality, fights for better zoning, for better performance by industry, against a planned turnpike expansion that would have destroyed some homes and much tranquility.

Mrs. Alman, 50-year-old chairman of the sociology department at Douglass College of Rutgers University, said there is significance in having an all-woman mayoral race.

She pointed out that last year an effort by women to put themselves on various town governing boards met with little success. Her Republican opponent is the first and only woman elected to the township council.

The mayor's term is four years, a $3,500-a-year part-time job that requires nearly full-time effort.

The current professional administrator, hired by the township, is a male, but only Dr. Alman feels strongly about replacing him with a woman. "To take advantage of women's sensibilities on a local level."

Mrs. Walling, a 50-year-old mother of five sons, won her primary election this spring against the regular Democratic nominee by a two-to-one margin.

Building her campaign on her 15 years as a town resident and the experience of her slate, she took advantage of the strong independent electorate with a youth-oriented, McGovern-type approach.

"Independents put us into office, really," she said, pointing to the 7,000 voters who cast ballots in the primaries in a town with only 17,000 registered voters.

Councilwoman Shapiro, a former caseworker for the Bureau of Children's Service in New Brunswick beat incumbent Mayor Joseph Mannon for her party's nomination by 500 votes.

"I think I lent credence by my performance" on the council, she said. "I view my campaign as the people's responding to the issues and my record, rather than just my being a woman."

All three women agree that the mayor must take a strong hand in revamping the township's master plan for growth, and in studying its problems of transportation, recreation and schooling.

But no matter which woman wins, they all agree with Dr. Alman's statement that the "township cannot lose in this election."

OKAY, I'LL DO IT MYSELF!

If your husband has two left thumbs and your handy friend or neighbor is away and the "busy" plumber is too busy to consider a dripping faucet an emergency which, nevertheless, is slowly driving you m-a-d, drip by drip, then read Okay, I'll Do It Myself! by Barbara A. Curry. This book takes the mystique out of home repairs in a humorous way and gives easy-to-follow instructions for repairing, installing, replacing and generally coping with practical home maintenance tasks. There are also 200 illustrations for added clarity. So, the next time frustration mounts over a broken tile or table, don't scream or smash — just fix it yourself.

Another writer to the rescue is Derek Williamson, author of The Complete Book of Pitfalls, A Victim's Guide to Repairs, Maintenance, and Repairing the Maintenance. Williamson explains why you shouldn't wear a necktie when wallpapering, tells what to do when the screwdriver is locked inside the drawer you need a screwdriver to open, and offers other helpful advice about household repairs and maintenance to the handyman, the handywoman, or to anyone "who has ever lifted a hammer and wondered why."

But if you would rather chisel than hammer away, then try your hand at wood sculpture where you can gouge and carve to your heart's delight. The Craft and Creation of Wood Sculpture starts off with the basics — tools, working space, varieties of wood, and then, step by step, Cecil C. Carstenson, the author, shows the beginner how to develop his skills. Eighty-four photographs illustrate the procedures, the work-in-progress, and the finished sculpture. When you are through making your creation, you can display it. And should someone notice "that wooden thing," you can say with pride, "I did it myself."

Or, if you have eyed-with-envy a beautiful oriental prayer rug and are minus a jingling purse, turn to needlepoint to satisfy that desire. Make your own rug. It can be any size, shape, design, and color. Be original or duplicate your favorite pattern. Hope Hanely, author of Needlepoint Rugs, fully explains how to make them, the correct canvas and wool to select, the most effective stitches to use, and the special techniques of finishing — joining pieces of canvas firmly together, blocking and lining. The illustrations are terrific, and so to will be that finished handmade rug.

On the other hand, if filmmaking is more your speed, then look at Handbook of Film Production by John Quick and Tom LaBau. Whether you are on a $200 budget or are planning a $1,000,000 studio production, this book is a practical guide and very impressive in its encyclopedic coverage.

If you happen to sport a "green thumb," be a creative horticulturist. The Green Thumb Book of Indoor Gardening by George "Doc" Abraham is full of tricks and revelations to make your plants look better and last longer. Learn the "gas" trick, performed with an ordinary apple, that makes a planted pineapple top grow into a true pineapple plant that will bear fruit.

Discover how to keep your plants alive and flourishing while you are off on vacation. Try growing an exotic indoor garden with bonzai and mung plants and luscious tropical fruits.

There are many more do-it-yourself books at the Kingston Area Library. Come in and browse around.

State Fair

Features Set

Mixed media and animated exhibits will be featured at the 1972 New York State SuperFair in the State Exhibits building, just inside the Main Gate.

The Fair will be held Aug. 29 through Sept. 4.

A display by the New York State Power Authority will depict the story of how electricity is generated. It will also show the Authority's environmental programs which include the protection and restoration of scenic areas, parks and playgrounds.

More than 10,000 polaroid pictures will be distributed free to youngsters touring the N.Y. State Division for Youth display. The young people will be photographed in a fantasy rocket ship and the pictures will be mounted in colorful brochures containing the "Young People's Bill of Rights and Responsibilities. Youth-sponsored recreation and service programs in Onondaga County will also be depicted by multi-media presentations.

Another new display at the State Exhibits Building is the expanded exhibit of the N.Y. State Division, Department of Education. It features a mobile laboratory. Also, the exhibit of the State Department of Agriculture and Markets (of which the State Fair is a division) will feature a carnival setting with an old-fashioned fair barker. Visitors will receive special match books which they can "wager" at a special "gambling table." Winners will receive free products from the Agriculture and Markets Department.

As part of the state exhibits feature, a special selection of the winning ticket in the New York State 50 cent Lottery will be held at 11:30 a.m., Aug. 31. Cylinders in a large plexiglass drum spin to determine by random selection the competing six-digit numbers from which one winner will be established by means of a horse race. The electronically-operated display board flashes the lineup on numbers and the prize schedule. A new Department of Motor Vehicles exhibit will feature an animated film, and the New York State Police will return to the State Exhibits Building with demonstrations of scuba diving, marksmanship, and the breathalyzer. The ever-popular State Police bloodhounds will also be back.

North Viets Try Tank Move

SAIGON (UPI)—North Vietnamese troops marked the 27th anniversary of Ho Chi Minh's takeover of Hanoi by attempting Saturday to move up masses of tanks to the Quang Tri city front. Allied troops and planes knocked out at least 29 of them, military spokesmen said.

Heavy fighting also erupted in the Que Son valley, 25 miles southwest of Da Nang, and in the Mekong Delta below Saigon, where a high-ranking U. S. military adviser was wounded when his helicopter was hit by gunfire.

In the Quang Tri city fighting, South Vietnamese Marines killed 17 members of another North Vietnamese tanks

North Vietnamese platoon (32 men at full strength) during a probing attack. The marines found several of the bodies had been tattooed with the words, "Born in the north to die in the south," UPI reporter Ted Kurrus said.

Kurrus said South Vietnamese Dragonfly jet bombers knocked out eight of 12 North Vietnamese tanks spotted Saturday two miles west of Quang Tri city. On Friday, South Vietnamese planes knocked out 11 tanks south of Quang Tri city, a military spokesman said.

The spokesman said seven other North Vietnamese tanks were knocked out by U.S. planes Friday and Saturday within 10 miles of Quang Tri, while South Vietnamese marines and paratroopers destroyed three others in the same area.

It was the biggest tank kill since the start of the South Vietnamese counteroffensive in Quang Tri province June 28. It coincided with the anniversary of the day in August, 1945, when the late President Ho Chi Minh's Viet Minh forces entered Hanoi following the defeat of the Japanese in World War II.

The U.S. command reported Saturday a second American plane—a U.S. Navy A7 Corsair II attack bomber—was shot down during the massive 370 tactical air strikes against North Vietnam Wednesday. The North Vietnamese had claimed that five American planes were destroyed. Earlier, the U.S. command had reported a Navy F4 Phantom destroyed during the raids.

Both planes were shot down by SAM2 antiaircraft missiles. All three crewmen were listed as missing. It brought to 24 the number of American planes downed by SAM2 missiles during the current North Vietnamese offensive.

The U.S. command also reported that a U.S. Army AH1 helicopter made a forced landing Friday after being hit by ground fire 47 miles northwest of Qui Nhon in the coastal highlands. One crewman was wounded, military spokesmen said.

UPI reporter Matt Franjola said that a South Vietnamese Air Force CH47 Chinook helicopter went out of control and crashed while taking off from the Kontum city airport in the Central Highlands late Saturday. The crew and an unknown number of refugees were killed, Franjola said, when the helicopter burned on impact.

THE END OF SUMMER PLAY — The summer season for the City of Kingston playgrounds officially came to a close at noon Friday. Shown packing away the bats for another summer are (L to R) Tom Sullivan, a program director; Tom Clausi, of the maintenance staff; Andrew J. Murphy III, superintendent of the Parks and Recreation Commission; Rose Ann Stevson, a program director; and Ron Gabriele, activities director for the recreation department. War Movement... 'Last Hurrah'

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — It's the last hurrah of the antiwar movement, say the organizers of the demonstrations, marches and sit-ins scheduled to take place during the Republican National Convention.

It is not the end of the movement, but the people who spent months planning this week's protest—people who have been active in the movement since the days of folk songs and

New Left—say it is probably the last attempt at a large-scale, national antiwar activity. "This will be the last of the national jamborees," said Jeff Nightbyrd, who has emerged as a leader of the Youth International party—Yippies—with the retirement from street politics of Jerry Rubin and Abbie Hoffman. "The national movement has disintegrated."

The comments of protest leaders here confirmed something that has grown increasingly obvious during the last two years. The ranks have thinned, the feeling diminished, and the antiwar movement, its broad base of support evaporated, is slowly winding down.

People marched this year after the bombing of Hanoi and the mining of Haiphong harbor. But their numbers were counted in the tens of thousands, not the hundreds of thousands needed to calculate the people who marched in the late 1960s. More than 10,000 persons were arrested on the streets of Washington during the antiwar activities of May 1970. There probably won't be half that many protesters in town this week, and only a fraction of those assembled are willing to risk arrest to make their point.

"There is a sense of sadness now, an awareness that it won't really affect political decisions," said Jay Craven, who two years ago was part of a delegation that signed a "Peoples Peace Treaty" with students in North and South Vietnam.

President Nixon and Democratic presidential nominee Sen. George McGovern are the main reasons for the movement's decline, according to the protest leaders here. Nixon is not ending the Vietnam war, in their view, but he has convinced most people he is stopping it. McGovern's candidacy has siphoned off the basically liberal, not radical, people who flocked to the movement in recent years.

Many movement people take a critical look at themselves in trying to explain the movement's decline.

"We have lost touch with the people. We have become too much the purists in approaching our issues," said Marty Feinwider, a coordinator with the Convention Coalition who has been active in the movement since 1966.

"We have moved the whole country to the left and made it possible for a McGovern to seem reasonable," Feinwider said.

Despite its decline, the protest leaders here said obituaries for the antiwar movement are premature. The big national shows are over, they said, but that only signals a return to local organizing, community work with a radical political thrust.

Antibusing Vote... Explained

BY LYNN MULVANEY

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Ulster County's Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr. and Toga Congressman Howard Robison, who is seeking election in Ulster's new 27th Congressional District were among three New York State Republicans voting against President Nixon's antibusing legislation Thursday and for a variety of reasons. The bill passed the House 282 to 102.

Congressman Fish, who is seeking reelection in Ulster's new 25th District, felt the bill was "unconstitutional" and he objected to a provision in it which would have permitted the reopening of desegregation court cases going back to 1964. He said he was bothered by such a provision because it would "roll back a lot of progress that has been made in the civil rights area in recent years."

Congressman Robison voted against the bill although he said there were certain portions of it he could support. Robison took exception to what he called the unfortunate inclusion in the measure of restrictions on the federal courts which he termed "unwise and probably unconstitutional."

Fish pointed out that in the past he has been against forced busing because of its inconvenience and unfairness but that the particular piece of legislation before the House Thursday was "a bad piece of legislation and he wouldn't be driven by emotion to vote for it."

Robison explained that under the proposal "the courts are told for example that busing cannot be used as a remedy for unconstitutional segregation in both secondary and elementary schools. The courts are also told that they must reopen old desegregation cases in which busing was a part of the final court order in those cases."

"I agree that some of the lower court rulings call for excessive transportation of student and such massive busing programs are impractical and destructive but the Swann case a year ago last April that it was prepared to overrule those orders when they came before us."

"Thus the House was taking what I consider a purely political position especially since it was obvious this bill headed certain oblivion in the Senate."

"So where are we?" he asks. "In my view," Robison said,

"a majority of the House voted Thursday night to tell their constituents how much they were against school busing. Voting to do so heedless of the fact that if this bill should somehow become law we would be pushing the pendulum all the way back to 1954."

Also the framers of our constitution had good reason to establish the executive and the judicial branches of our government as separate but independent powers. And if the day has come when Congress thinks it can control the decisions of the Supreme Court under its limited authority to regulate its appellate jurisdiction then surely the day has also come when the court can no longer stand as the last bulwark for the protection of all minority groups and interests in this country."

Bike-Riding Hijacker... Condition Reported 'Good'

SEATTLE (UPI)—Frank Sibley Jr., who was shot and wounded by FBI agents aboard a hijacked airliner, was reported Saturday to have been divorced shortly before he rode a bicycle into the Reno, Nev., airport, seized the plane and demanded $2 million ransom.

Sibley, 43, was in good condition in a Seattle hospital while awaiting his arraignment on federal charges of air piracy for the Friday hijacking that included a stop in Vancouver, B.C.

At his home in Stateline, Nev., at the south end of Lake Tahoe, Sibley's acquaintances said he had been divorced in the last few days. His former wife, Beate Jenny Sibley, 38, a native of Germany, works as a keno ticket writer at the Sahara Tahoe Casino. Sibley's ex-wife, a tall and attractive blonde, stuck her head out of their rented, rambling two-story home overlooking Lake Tahoe Saturday only to say she had no comment.

Neighbors said the greying hijacker was a loner who said little to them except hello. They believed that Sibley had at one time been a pilot.

Sibley rode a bicycle with a rifle strapped to the handlebars across the Reno airport Friday to a United Air Lines 727 which he commandeered.

While Sibley was in the flight cockpit, 25 passengers and three stewardesses were evacuated. The remaining three crewmen took off with Sibley to Vancouver while he demanded $2 million in currency and 15 pounds of gold.

When airline officials were unable to come up with the money at the Canadian airport, the hijacker was persuaded to allow the plane to proceed to Seattle.

The gold, plus about $1 million—all the airline said it could raise—was placed on the plane. Then a two-man "relief crew" came aboard. But they were really two FBI agents, both of whom are licensed pilots.

Another agent under the plane used a pole to lift a pistol to an open cockpit window. While Sibley was distracted, a crewman grabbed the gun and passed it to one of the agents, who fired. Sibley was shot in the back, neck and leg but was conscious and talking as he was carried away on a stretcher.

In a lengthy statement read over Seattle and Vancouver radio stations at Sibley's insistence, he said he was a member of a paramilitary group dedicated to ending the Vietnam War.

Sibley said he was fed up with President Nixon's "broken promises" and threatened to destroy United Air Lines planes one by one until the war was ended.

An $82 Million Observatory

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—The U. S. Space agency plans to launch an $82-million orbiting observatory named Copernicus early Monday to give astronomers a new look at the universe and an overview of its most basic questions.

The 4,900-pound spacecraft is the heaviest, most complex and one of the costliest automated observatories ever built. Scientists predicted it will help revolutionize astronomy.

The satellite's record 32-inch diameter telescope will be able to view the heavens with unmatched clarity. Its aim will be to look down from its 360-mile high orbit and maintain a steady gaze on a man's head on earth.

But the observatory's primary objective will be to look into deep space and analyze great clouds of interstellar gas and dust that scientists believe are the seeds of stars not yet born and the ashes of those that have long since died.

It also will examine hot stars which are mere babies by astronomical standards. Just as biologists study the evolution of life by examining certain types of plants and animals, astronomers turn to the hot stars to learn about stellar evolution. Launch is scheduled at 6:28 a. m. EDT and project officials reported Saturday that preparations were going smoothly. Engineers gave the silver and white Atlas-Centaur rocket final engine checks and completed radio tests.

The satellite was named after the famous 16th century Polish astronomer, Nicolaus Copernicus, and Poland's ambassador to the United States, Witold Trampeczynski, is expected to be among a large crowd of dignitaries on hand to view the pre-dawn blastoff.

The spacecraft is the fourth and last of a hard-luck series of Orbiting Astronomical Observatories (OAO). The first failed three days after launch in 1966 and the third was destroyed in 1970 when its rocket nose cone failed to come off.

The second Stargazer, OAO2, was successfully launched in 1968 and is still working. Dr.

Nancy G. Roman, OAO program scientist, said OAO 2 has shown astronomers how to use telescopes in space "and now we want to exploit that ability."

If the new spacecraft fails, Dr. James E. Kupperian, the project scientist, said it would be a catastrophe. Astronomers will not have another chance to view the heavens with such clarity and precision until the 1980s.

The 32-inch telescope designed by Princeton University, is the craft's astronomical eye. But the satellite also carries three telescopes designed by the University College of London to study x-rays from puzzling objects known as pulsars and quasars.

Hyde Park Playhouse Finishes Its Season With a Flourish This Week and Next as This Collage of Final Events Onstage There Proves

A PHOTO OF THE "JACOB H. TREMPER" when the steamboat was new and the pride and joy of the Newburgh and Albany service. Built in 1885, the "Tremper" paddled her way along the upper Hudson River for 44 years. She was broken up at Newburgh in 1929.

The Other Half of the 'Half Moon'

By CAPT. WM. O. BENSON

For a period of over 70 years prior to 1928, there was a steamboat service between Newburgh and Albany. At its peak it provided a steamboat in each direction, carrying freight and passengers on a daily basis. The steamers would make landings at almost every city, village and hamlet along the banks of the upper river.

During the latter part of the 19th century and the first part of the 20th century, the steamboats "Jacob H. Tremper" and "M. Martin" were the two steamboats providing the service. At the end of the 1918 season, the "Martin" had outlived her usefulness and for the next ten years the "Tremper" carried on alone, going up one day and returning the next.

As the 1920's wore on, business on the line continued to dwindle. The "Tremper" stopped carrying passengers and in her final years was used to carry freight only. After over 40 years of service, the "Tremper" really showed her age. Her guards hung low above the water and moss and eel grass would hang from her paddle boxes.

An Albany Landing

One morning in the late summer of her final season, the steamer "Trojan" of the Hudson River Night Line was landing at Albany just as the "Jacob H. Tremper" paddled by on her down river trip. Three lady passengers were out on the upper deck watching her go by.

As Captain George Warner of the "Trojan" came down from the bridge, one of the lady passengers said to him, "My goodness, Captain, what old boat is that?"

The Captain replied, "Why, my good ladies, did you ever hear of the 'Half Moon'?"

"Yes," said the lady, "Henry Hudson discovered this river with the 'Half Moon'."

"Well," the Captain said, "That is the other half of the 'Half Moon'."

Quite a Sight

During the mid-1920's when I was a teen age boy growing up in Sleightsburgh, it used to be quite a sight to see the old "Jacob H. Tremper" coming in Rondout Creek about 10:30 a.m. on her up trip and then about 3 or 4 p.m. the next day on her down trip. Her guards would nearly be dragging in the water, her forward deck would be loaded with freight, and water would be pouring out of the lattice work on her wheel houses.

When it would be flood tide, she would come very close to Sleight's dock at Sleightsburgh so as to turn and put her port bow to the dock, under the stern of the "Benjamin B. Odell" or "Homer Ramsdell," at Rondout. At that time, Sleight's store was still in operation adjacent to the old chain ferry slip. When the "Tremper" would pass close to the dock, some of the Sleightsburgh boys would get overripe tomatoes or rotten eggs from Sleight's store and see how many letters in the name on her paddle box they could hit. Although I am somewhat reluctant to admit it now, I was one of them.

How the mate would shake his fist and swear at us! Since the "Tremper" no longer carried passengers, her deck crew no longer bothered to scrub the white work. The splashes from the eggs and tomatoes would be on all summer and fall. She sure did look like a "Half Moon."

As a boy, it never occurred to me the "Tremper" was nearing the end of her career. In the eyes of a barefoot youth, time stood still and somehow it seemed summer would last forever. Then, it seemed impossible that in but a few short years the "Jacob H. Tremper" would no longer be coming in Rondout Creek, black soft coal smoke trailing from her tall black smokestack, a white plume of steam rising skyward from her whistle as she blew off the Cornell coal pocket for the deckhands to get ready to handle her lines.

As the years passed, I developed a great affection for the old "Tremper." She never deserved the shabby treatment she received from a bunch of impetuous boys in the days of those long ago summers on the dock at Sleightsburgh.

THE "JACOB H. TREMPER" in a photo taken in 1928, her last year in service on the Hudson. Her sagging guards and generally unkempt appearance attests to her age. An automobile, whose prevalent use contributed to her demise, is incongruously perched on her forward freight deck. (D. C. Ringwald photo)

THE STEAMER "TROJAN" of the Hudson River Night Line at her berth in Albany. It was the captain of this steamer who likened the "Tremper" to the "Half Moon." The Central Hudson Line's Albany wharf was immediately north of the Night Line pier.

"PORTRAIT OF A MAN" is one of the photographic works by Charli Friedlander now sharing wall space in the two-man "Images" show at Country Butterfly Galleries in Modena.

Country Butterfly's 'Images' Novel Show

MODENA native New Yorker; studied at Cooper Union and the Art Students League; has exhibited widely in New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia in one-man and group shows. His work is in the collections of Long Island's Temple Judea, Mt. Vernon's Temple Emanuel, and the National Council of Jewish Women of New Jersey and Philadelphia.

Photographer Friedlander is a recent discovery of Butterfly Galleries. A Modena resident in his early 20s, his talent for photographic portraits is apparent in such works as "Louise" and "Portrait of a Man." Active with a camera since 1967, he began with nature studies; has since changed with the times to focus his art on more experimental work, creating stark graphic photographs.

He suggests that his work "comes closest to the novels of Robbe-Grillet," and that his concentration is on the external forms rather than the internal aspects of his subject.

SITTING ON A CHAIR ON A WALL AT "MYSTERY SPOT"

The Laws of Gravity Revoked at Cairo's New 'Mystery Spot'

CAIRO The Catskills, home of the legendary Rip Van Winkle, former watering place for U.S. presidents and vacation spot for millions, has become the home of a new and strange tourist attraction. Located at the foot of the eastern slopes, along Route 32, just outside of Cairo, is a fascinating, crazily build house where weird and wonderful things happen.

Water appears to run uphill. You can literally sit on a wall. And to walk erect, you have to lean.

It's all part of an apparently unexplainable quirk of nature that has been incorporated by two enterprising young brothers into what they call the "Mystery Spot." During the past two years, tens of thousands of people have come by auto and bus to stop, visit and offer dozens of theories as to what causes what happens to happen. But these remain theories. No one can pin down the cause for these strange occurrences.

Similar Spots

Charles and Jon Kurutz, the brothers who own and run "Mystery Spot" have their own ideas. Several years ago, in Michigan, they worked at a similar spot. There, too, people visited a strange house where you could step up onto a high table with the same ease as stepping onto a high curb. Or where you could feel the pull of the earth with every step. Later, the brothers read of the Vortex in Oregon where there were similar strange occurrences obviously contrary to the laws of gravity.

The Kurutz brothers researched the similarities between the Oregon and Michigan locations. When they came up with what they thought were a practical list of similarities, they set out to see if they could locate any similar phenomena.

In Wilmington, N.Y., they came across just such a spot. Trees appeared to be growing at an angle. At certain spots you could feel a pull as though there was something beneath the earth drawing everything to it. The Kurutz brothers erected a cabin where they put these natural happenings to the test. They found that one had to walk at an angle to stay erect and that free-swinging pendulum appears to take twice as much power to push one way as the other.

Two years ago, they came upon this most southerly "Mystery Spot" location. Just about three miles north of the famed Catskill Game Farm, they found a wooded spot where trees grew at a strange angle, and where one could feel a strong pull as one walked through the woods. Further experiments bore out the fact that this location apparently had the same conditions as those in upstate New York, Michigan and Oregon. For some reason still unknown to the Kurutz' a strange gravitational force was at work.

Immediately Apparent

This becomes immediately apparent to the visitor. Upon arrival at the location, right off Route 32, the visitor is told by the guide of the background of this unique attraction. A group of from 10 to 15 then climbs the modest incline to the cabin and within moments begins to feel the strange force exerting at the gateway to the Catskills.

itself. The guide points out two cement blocks and, with the aid of a carpenter's level, shows that they are perfectly in line. How then is it that two people of equal heights have about four inches of difference when they stand face to face on the two blocks? And why do they switch locations and find that the "shorter" person has now become the "taller" one?

There are more questions that go unanswered. Water is pumped into a trough and apparently runs uphill. A rubber ball bounces at an angle. You can place a chair on a wall and sit on it. Why? The guide can only suggest the possibility of an underground lode of magnetic metal.

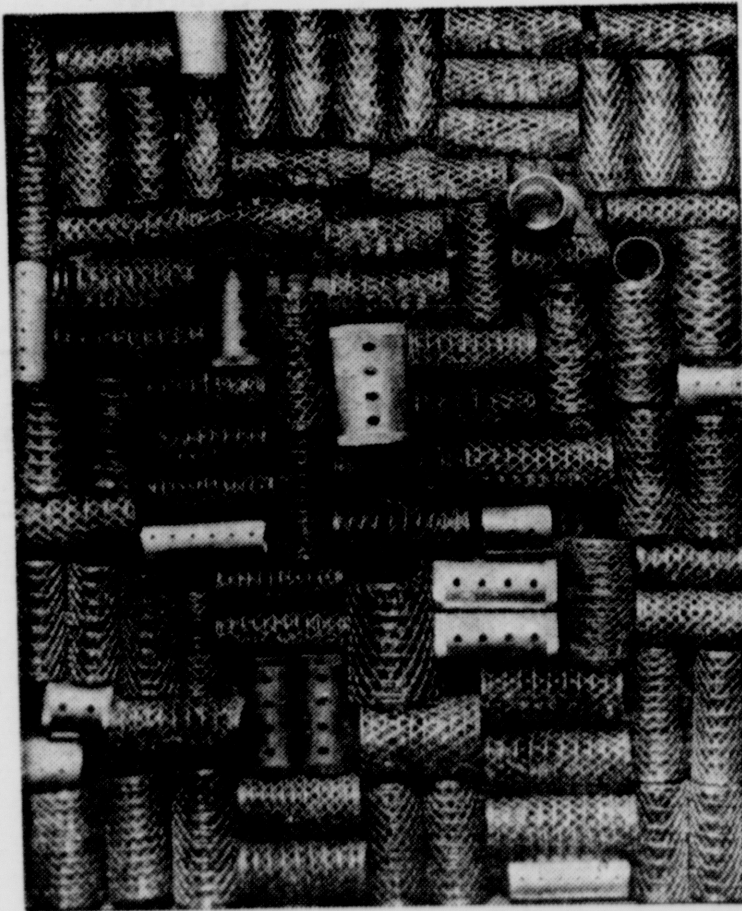

Or perhaps that the Oregon, Michigan, Upper New York and Catskill locations are all located on latitudinal lines of the globe. Or it may be because of some other reason connected with the Catskill mountain range, one of the oldest in the Western Hemisphere.

The entire "tour" takes about 20 minutes and there is usually no more than a five or ten minute wait between tours. The young guides can handle most of the questions. Parents find the "Mystery Spot" an excellent way to introduce children to the wonders of geology, physics and prehistoric history. Schools, too, have found the attraction to be an excellent stimulus to scientific studies.

Modest Charge

There is a modest admission charge of 75 cents for adults and 50 cents for children (under 12). Group rates are available. There is provision for bus parking and groups are urged to phone ahead so they can be accommodated.

"Mystery Spot" is a journey to a strange and fascinating world that is readily accessible at the gateway to the Catskills.

ASSEMBLAGE by Henry Newman, now on exhibit at Modena's Country Butterfly Galleries, has a familiar look to any woman who's ever worn them and any man who's watched his woman labor at the task of getting them in place. Assemblage is entitled, as it would have to be, "Hair Curlers."

CATHERINE GAFFIGAN brings her talents to "Company," Tony Award winning musical comedy slated as the next show at Woodstock Playhouse.

FRANK MOON contributes to the show-stopping numbers in "Company," Broadway's critically applauded play due at Woodstock from Aug. 29 to Sept. 3.

MARY JANE HOUDINA, triple threat singer, dancer and actress, is in the large cast that will offer audiences sophisticated entertainment in "Company."

Exciting 'Company' Signs in for Stay of Two Weeks

WOODSTOCK — "The play, 'Company,' is a sophisticated Tony-award winning musical comedy, the cast is incredibly talented and attractive, and our theater is weather-proof . . . that is, it's air conditioned for warm weather, but dry and comfortable for the cold rainy nights." That's how M. Edgar Rosenblum, executive producer of the Woodstock Playhouse, describes the last production of this season which opens Tuesday, Aug. 22, and runs through Sept. 3.

As for the play, the book is by George Furth, the music and lyrics by Stephen Sondheim who was responsible for the lyrics of "West Side Story," "Gypsy," and "Follies" among others. In the New York Times, Walter Kerr said of "Company," "Stephen Sondheim has never written a more sophisticated, more pertinent, or . . . more melodious score; and the lyrics are every bit as good." Time magazine said, "This is a musical that one wants to rave about first and talk about later." In the Wall Street Journal, John J. O'Connor wrote, "Casting an acerbic eye on the state of contemporary marriage in general . . . 'Company' is by turns brassy, brittle, sympathetic, cynical, romantic, calculating and alive — oh, so very much alive."

"It's been a long time since a musical has come along with so many show-stopping numbers."

Just back from a successful directing stint in Canada, Harold G. Baldrige has a cast long on ability as well as experience. As the 35-year-old bachelor looking in on marriages, Jered Holmes has among his credits motion pictures, night club appearances and many television shows (including the "Tonight" show, "the Merv Griffin Show", and "Dark Shadows"). Holmes, Lance Hewett, and Erika Petersen brought audiences to their feet with applause during the recent Woodstock production of "Jacques Brel." Katie Anders, Frank Moon, and Tracy Goss have added Woodstock audience approval earlier this season to their list of successful television and Broadway appearances. Among his many Broadway credits Chris Gampel lists "The Front Page" which he also appeared in on television, while Nancy Nugent will be remembered for her performances on Broadway in "The Seven Year Itch", "The Male Animal", and on television's "Omnibus" and "Kraft Theatre". Also singing, dancing and acting their way through this comedy will be: Annette Hunt, Les Barkdull, Catherine Gaffigan, Al Toigo, Mary Jane Houdina, and Flora Burton.

With two pianos and percussion, Bryan Williams, Music Director will provide the great sound he has managed previously this season at the Woodstock Playhouse. While curtain is 8:40 Tuesdays through Fridays, there are two performances Saturdays at 5 p.m. and 9 p.m., Sundays at 7:30, except Sunday, Sept. 3 the curtain will be at 8:40 p.m. For ticket reservations and information call (914) 679-2015, or write The Woodstock Playhouse, P.O. Box 266, Woodstock, N.Y. 12498.

Inaugural Trip for Playgoers To See Shaw's 'Major Barbara'

A new way from New York City to Stratford, Conn., via a 390 passenger cruise ship, the Yankee Clipper, operated by the Connecticut Steamboat Company, will bring playgoers to the American Shakespeare Festival Theatre on Friday, Sept. 1, for a performance of Shaw's "Major Barbara."

This is the first time since pre-world War II that boat service from New York has been resumed, and this will be the Yankee Clipper's inaugural trip. Playing voyagers will assemble 2:30 p.m. A bus shuttle will transport them to the Consolidated Yacht Yard in City Island, where the Yankee Clipper will leave at 3:30 p.m. and arrive in Stratford at 7:30 p.m. A picnic supper will be served on board ship. After the performance at the Festival Theatre, the playgoers will return to New York by bus.

Those preferring a longer weekend outing, combined with theatre-going, may spend the night at a Stratford inn and continue the next morning by boat up the Connecticut River to the Goodspeed Opera House in East Haddam, Conn., see the musical "Where's Charley?" at the 5 p.m. performance on Saturday, Sept. 2, and on Sunday, Sept. 3, pay a visit to historic Mystic Seaport. For further information and reservations, call—toll free—at (800) 243-9570.

Epoch - Making Star Hyde Park's Finale As Season's Closer

TOM FLYNN will sing the Jesus Christ songs in the production of SUPERSTAR which will be at the Hyde Park Playhouse from August 21-26.

HYDE PARK
"Superstar," which begins a six-night run at Hyde Park Playhouse tomorrow, Monday, Aug. 21, is expected to go on record as another all-out success for the Dutchess County Playhouse. Crowds have lined up worldwide for this ultimate symphonic rock concert with the music of "Jesus Christ Superstar" plus selected works from "Godspell"—and Hyde Park will probably prove no exception to that rule.

When the lights inside dim each night from Aug. 21 through Aug. 26 in this Old English Touring Company concert version of "Superstar" (which ends the regular play season at Hyde Park), and the Gemini Light Show begins to flash and whirl on the screen behind the band, audiences of all ages will become aware that a phenomenon is beginning.

The powerful and simple controversial rock opera centers around three characters, Jesus, Judas Iscariot and Mary Magdalene. The music is varying in tempo; is both rhythmic and pulsing. The lyrics have been known to pin listeners to their seats because they are powerful and because they are controversial, in almost every song.

Recording Star

Jesus, the character, as played by Epic records star Tom Flynn, is interpreted as an extraordinary man, but clearly a man and not a God. He has His weak moments, and these times are intense with His insecurity as He faces the overpowering crowds. His responsibility for the Apostles, and His enormous destiny. Flynn has brought audiences of all ages from tears to pure joy with one of the incredible voices to hit the professional stage in many years, and in the Hyde Park production, he is required to reach to the height of his range, shriek out in anger, and plumb the basement of his vocal abilities.

Also appearing at Hyde Park will be Jim Riccio as Judas, the betrayer lacks the trust needed to allow Christ to carry on his work, and Wendy D'Lugin as Mary, the woman who loves Jesus and is changed by what He is expressing. Her song, "I Don't Know How to Love Him," is always an audience pleaser.

Talent Contest Is Scheduled At Cobleskill Sunshine Fair

COBLESKILL
More than $1,000 will be awarded by the Cobleskill Sunshine Fair to winners of the fifth annual talent contest.

There are 16 amateur classifications including folk sing, dance, novelty, baton, instrumental and vocal.

Separate competition is provided for solo and group with each talent judged on the basis of audience appeal, said Anthony Lambiase, director.

Judging is set for each of the first five afternoons of the fair,

Aug. 22-26, and Sunday evening, Aug. 27.

Special features include a battle of the bands in the evening of Aug. 25 and an all-Schoharie County contest that afternoon.

The 20-act grand final is planned for Aug. 27 in the new Sunshine Court.

Ribbons and cash prizes including $200 for the winner of the battle of the bands will be awarded. There is no entry fee.

Paintings, Enamels Display This Month at Woodstock Bank

The paintings and enamels of Mrs. Blanche Hoodes will be exhibited at the Inter-County Savings Bank, Woodstock, New York, during the month of August.

Mrs. Hoodes' career started in Woodstock when she became a resident of the art colony many years ago. She continued the study and teaching of art during winters on Long Island and recently in Sarasota, Florida. She is a life member of the Art Students League.

Shows in Weston, Conn., Great Neck, L.I. and Sarasota, Fla. She has exhibited in a number of group shows where she received several awards and prizes. Her paintings and enamels hang in private collections throughout the country.

ANNE LAWRENCE, SCULPTOR, AT WORK

Clay and Fabric Display Now At The Gallery in New Paltz

NEW PALTZ

A delightful and colorful show of Anne Lawrence's clay works and Beverly Stram's fabric works is currently at The Gallery in New Paltz, 69 Main Street, second floor. Light-hearted and fun, the show pleasantly changes the pace of the Gallery's recent exhibitions and because of the superior quality of the work, the show is a must for anyone interested in clay sculpture or weaving and applique.

Mrs. Lawrence's works include hanging planters complete with plants, imaginative bird-baths, pottery and indoor and garden sculpture. She combines unusual materials such as feathers, raffia, stones and found objects with her clay works. A major piece in the show will be the Scarecrow, which recently won an award at a prominent New York exhibition.

Mrs. Lawrence's work has been exhibited in important museums throughout the country, including the Contemporary Craft Museum, New York City, the Worcester Museum, and the Smithsonian, Washington, D.C. She studied at the Museum of Modern Art and with the Greenwich House Potters where she also taught a young people's class. She is a member of the Artist Craftsmen of New York and the Greenwich House Potters and Sculptors.

Mrs. Stram's work is, technically, woven and appliqued wall hangings and pillows, but as S. Velma Pugsley phrased it recently, "This is more art than craft . . . For the imagination and wit of Beverly Stram are not so often found in the needlecrafts. The design, color and the use of texture along with all the related factors that are evident in these works are on an individual plane."

Mrs. Stram has studied in California and New York and has been exhibiting in New York for the past few years. She started sewing at age five and has never ceased to be entranced by fabrics.

The works of both artists vary greatly in size and price. There are very small figures, pots, and hangings which sell for just a few dollars. And there are full wall-sized hangings and life sized figures selling for a few hundred dollars.

The exhibition opened August 8 and runs for three weeks, through August 26. The Gallery is open Tuesday through Saturday, 1:30-5:00, and by appointment.

Unusual Exhibition By Three Ceramists At Polari Gallery

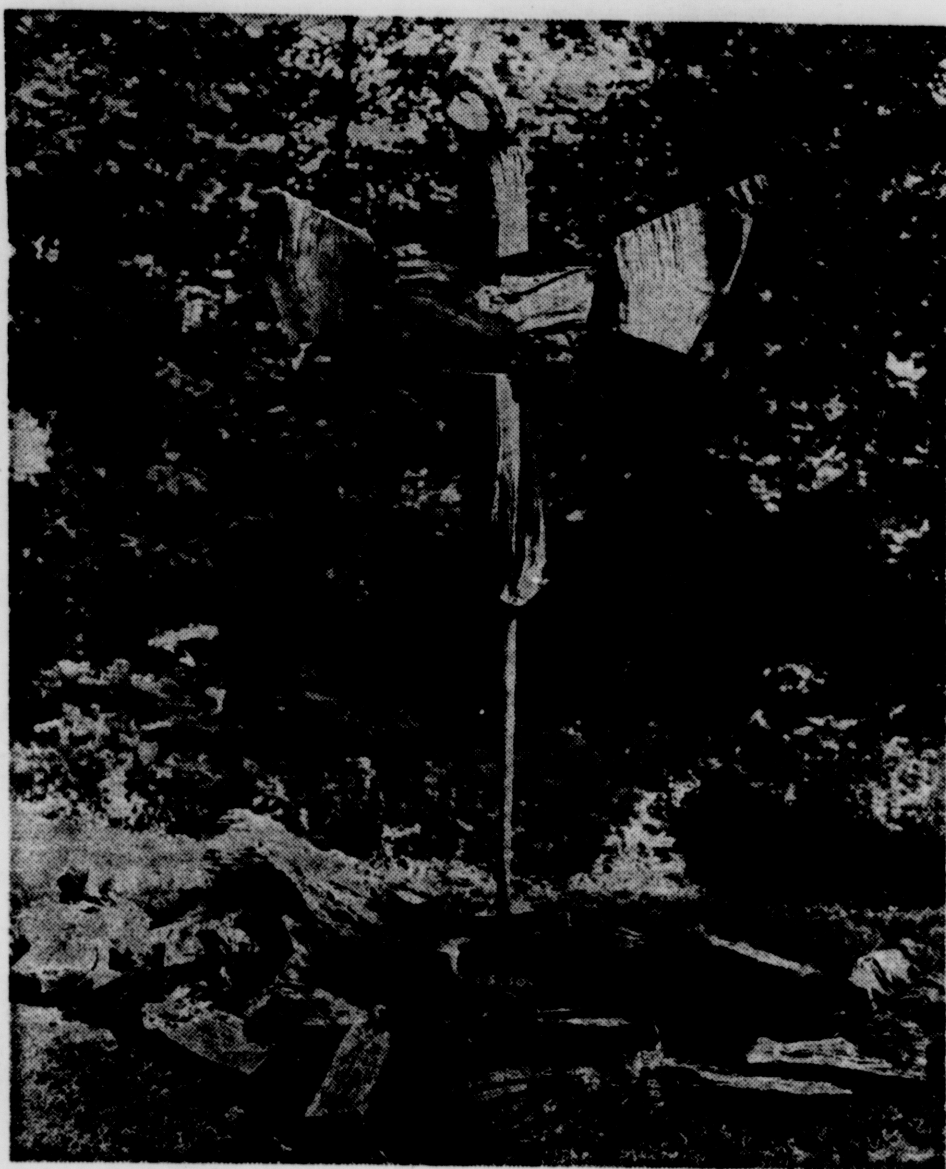

An exhibition of works by three outstanding ceramic artists, Sophia Fenton, Billie Luisi and Norman Bacon, is now on exhibit at the Polari Gallery in Woodstock. The three artists, all residents of the Woodstock area, utilize clay to create sculptural forms ranging from hanging pots and bowls to large abstract sculptures and whimsical organic forms.

Billie Luisi, a self-taught ceramist with a pottery and painting background, has been involved with production potting and the teaching of pottery at camps, settlement houses, recreation centers and non-structured school situations. Her work was exhibited at the Polari Gallery in August 1969 and July 1970, and her book "Potworks: A First Book of Clay" will be published next spring by William Morrow and Company of New York. Miss Luisi produces oversize pots and sculptural pieces of unusual form and style. Among her most recent works are aquariums of scale-like exterior and large hanging planters. Accomplished in glaze chemistry her pieces have striking and uncommon color. Sophia Fenton has had one-man shows with the Hudson River Museum and America House and has participated in exhibits at the Jewish Museum, Silvermine Guild, Cooper Union and in invitationals such as the World's Fair, Contemporary Ceramics by U.S. Potters, 1962 and the Brooklyn Museum. She has won awards from America House, the Hudson River Museum and the Westchester Art Association. Her work has been reproduced for "My World of Art," "Odyssey of Pottery," "Crafts Horizon," and "Ceramics Monthly." She has had vast teaching experience at Goddard College, Children's Village, Harlem Hospital and the Y.M.H.A. of Scarsdale, N.Y. Her love of rich earth tones is evidenced in various pot forms, hanging planters, sculpture, hanging objects and clay stools.

The third ceramist, Norman Bacon, a recipient of a presentation show at the Woodstock Artists Association earlier this season is showing at the Polari Gallery for the first time. The work of Norman Bacon offers a distinct contrast to that of the other two ceramic artists. It can best be described as whimsical, light and often humorous in concept. Mr. Bacon uses highly imaginative animal and vegetable forms as a point of departure.

The Polari Gallery is located adjacent to the Woodstock Playhouse.

WOOD PIECE labeled "Sentinel," made from white oak by artist Charles Hall, is included in current Sculpture Garden at Woodstock's Gardner Gallery. It's part of "The Celebration of the Sun" experience continuing until September at the Mead Mountain Road gallery, donated by owner B. Gardner to the young artists of Woodstock. Event combines sculpture garden, painting gallery, and weekend live music by art colony musicians.

MARLON BRANDO portrays Don Vito Corleone, the powerful Godfather in a scene from "The Godfather," the motion picture now featured at Kingston's Community Theatre.

MOVIES

The Godfather

It's been a long wait for local audiences, but "The Godfather" (already the biggest box office hit of all time) has finally arrived in town for a showing. And, as it unreels currently at Kingston's Community Theatre, it has to be extolled as even more gripping than the best seller from which it has been adapted.

Boasting a great screenplay, a distinguished job of directing, and a cast that is totally perfect, "The Godfather" has been well worth waiting for. And nothing could give a veteran Marlon Brando fan like this writer more joy than seeing Brando in a role in which he is so powerful that we have no qualms about sticking by our longtime belief that he is among the greatest actors of our time.

Indeed, every one in the cast is superlative — and praise must be showered on Al Pacino and James Caan as the sons of aging Don Vito, as portrayed by Brando. Major and minor characters alike help to make "The Godfather" a superlative work of whopping good entertainment.

Excellent and Fascinating
Basically, the film is reminiscent of the old-fashioned gangster movies, while managing to excel them by a million light years. The "family" life of the men of the Mafia is there in fascinating detail in weddings, baptisms and funerals. And the drama of their "business" meetings, violent beatings and gory rub-outs are there, too.

Mobsters in their homes and mobsters talking death and destruction make for dialogue that is well-written, and it is delivered with the proper love and toughness by Brando and his supporting cast. It all adds up to good acting and a good story, and — if we have to take the violence along with it — we'll buy that, too... at least in this one instance. For "The Godfather" is an example of Hollywood's own special art at its blazing best.

Prime Cut

If this is an example of what happens to recent Academy Award winners, we suggest Lee Marvin and Gene Hackman burn their contracts and melt down their Oscars to molten metal. For "Prime Cut," the mobster movie now showing at the local Sunset Drive-In and Poughkeepsie's Overlook Drive-In, doesn't do right by the talents of Marvin and Hackman.

A drama about a feud between two factions of a gangland mob, filmed in Kansas City, Chicago and Canada, it's all pretty senseless and close to sleazy. Marvin, playing a gangland "enforcer," brings as much dignity and reserve to his role as possible under the circumstances. Hackman, as the leader of the crime syndicate Marvin's out to stop, is totally lost in a part that was never meant for him.

Briefly, the story has Marvin being hired by a Chicago mob chieftain to collect $500,000 owed him by Hackman, a Kansas city gang leader. Seems the scheming and ruthless Hackman has no intention of sharing his illegal gains with the Chicago mob and has shot down Marvin's predecessors.

One Good Scene

The only scene in the whole mishmash that moved us at all was a sequence in which Marvin and newcomer Sissy Spacek are being chased through an unharvested wheatfield by a man driving a huge reaper which is bent upon grinding the pair up and coughing them out as two compact and neatly-packaged bales. At the last perilous moment the two are saved when one of Marvin's friends drives a brand new $8,000 Cadillac into the powerful teeth of the menacing machine. Crashing into the jaws of the reaper, the expensive Caddy is chewed up and the parts come out the other end totally destroyed and neatly baled-up.

On the double bill at the Sunset currently is the rerun "The Grasshopper," "R" rated love story starring Jacqueline Bisset, with Jim Brown and Joseph Cotton as two of the men in her actively amoral life.

Other Choices

THE GRADUATE. Held over for a second week at Kingston's Mayfair is this rerun, an Oscar-winning film of several seasons back. Mike Nichols directed the story of a young man just out of college (Dustin Hoffman) who gets entangled with an older woman (Anne Bancroft), but ends up marrying her daughter (Katharine Ross).

FRENZY. Nothing short of a masterpiece is this suspenseful thriller by the inimitable Alfred Hitchcock. Now featured at the Rosendale Theatre and Red Hook Lyceum, it's a taut, tight, fast-paced, beautifully photographed film about an ex-RAF squadron leader who's caught in a web of circumstantial evidence as the leading suspect in a series of necktie strangulation murders of pretty young women. Fabulous stuff!

A CLOCKWORK ORANGE. Stanley Kubrick's fascinating, provocative film about future society also manages to be strange, weird, shocking and repelling for its incredible violence. But there will be sardonic humor here for some as the very talented Malcolm McDowell stars as a young tough named Alex who vacillates between ultra-violence and Beethoven. It's on screen currently at Hyde Park's Roosevelt.

FIDDLER ON THE ROOF. A joyous musical based on the longest running stage show of all time. With Israeli actor Topol starring as the milkman trying to marry off his daughters, it's singing and dancing its way on screen at Catskill's Community Theatre currently.

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA

GANGLAND CONFRONTATION Hollywood-style is a nose-to-nose affair. Movie toughies Lee Marvin (L) and Gene Hackman fight it out as opposing heads of crime syndicates in "Prime Cut," spotlighting gangland rivalry and violence in America today. Movie's the current attraction at the local Sunset Drive-In and Poughkeepsie's Overlook Drive-In.

TONY BENNETT, one of the greatest vocal stylists in the U.S., returns to Saratoga Performing Arts Center tonight, Sunday, Aug. 20. Recently back from playing to sell-out crowds in London, Bennett's long and successful career is testament to his particular talent and popularity. A top vocalist since 1951, his million-selling records have included "I Left My Heart in San Francisco," "For Once In My Life," and "Just In Time."

CHER — of Sonny and Cher, whose upcoming performance at Saratoga Performing Arts Center has long been sold out, have agreed to do a second show at 3:30 p.m. the same day — Monday, Aug. 28. The singing comedy duo hit the big time with their TV show and many hit records; will be making a second appearance at SPAC. Tickets for the matinee are now available.

'Mardi Gras of Champions' Drum - Bugle Corps Competition Scheduled for This Saturday

SCHENECTADY The "Mardi Gras of Champions," a spectacular senior drum and bugle corps competition that flourished in this area for many years, will return this summer to Schenectady for a return engagement.

Four local men, all former members of area drum and bugle corps, will present the event "under the lights," August 26, at the Mont Pleasant High School Field. The sponsors anticipate up to 500 spectators will attend the colorful contest in its second year of renewal. Starting time is 8 p.m.

Competing for $5,100 in prizes will be five of the top senior drum and bugle corps in the East: the Caballeros from Hawthorne, N. J., the New York Skyliners from Yonkers, Les Diplomats from Quebec, Canada, the Rochester Crusaders and the Connecticut Hurricanes from Shelton, Conn. The exhibition corps will be the Mello-dears, a 100 strong all girl corps from Owego, N. Y.

The "Mardi Gras of Champions" is being staged by Metroland Productions, Inc. Edward Beaupre, John Chakas, John F. Kirvin and Francis L. Stoen are members of the corporation established to bring musical products and other special entertainment to the Capital District. Part of the proceeds will benefit the Big Brothers of Schenectady, Inc. The "Mardi Gras of Champions" will be three hours of entertainment by highly trained and disciplined corps. The music is versatile, including songs from Broadway and motion pictures, semi-classics, and popular hits. The Mardi Gras has been scheduled near the end of summer so that performing groups will be at their best form.

In case of rain, the Mardi Gras will be held Sunday, Aug. 27, at 2 p.m. in the same location. The competition site is two and one-half miles from State Thruway Exit 25 via Interstate Route 890.

Tickets are on sale now in Schenectady at Apex Music Korner and Van Curler Music Store; in Albany at Bob Daubney's Sporting Goods Store, Central Avenue; and at Latham at Apex Music Store, Latham Corners Shopping Center.

For additional information, contact Edward Beaupre at Mardi Gras headquarters, 1395 Fifth Street, Schenectady.

Schuyler Mansion Historic Site

ALBANY Next time you're in Albany, plan to visit the Schuyler Mansion, a historic site of both state and national significance.

The mansion, of red brick in the Georgian style, was built in the early 1760's for Philip Schuyler, later an American Revolutionary general and state legislator. He represented the young New York State in the first Senate of the United States. Schuyler's daughter Elizabeth married Alexander Hamilton in 1780, and much of Hamilton's Federalist political writing was done at the Schuyler home.

Tragedy struck the Schuylers following the turn of the 19th century. Philip Schuyler's wife, Catherine Van Rensselaer, died in 1803, and his close friend and son-in-law, Hamilton, was killed in the famous duel with Aaron Burr in 1804. Schuyler died later that year.

Today the gracious Schuyler Mansion is maintained by the New York State Historic Trust. It is open free to the public year 'round.

UCCC to Offer Art Evenings This Fall

Four evening art courses will be offered this fall by the Department of Visual Arts at Ulster County Community College.

Painting I will meet on Monday nights, Art History I is scheduled for Tuesday nights, Drawing and Composition I will be held on Wednesday nights, and Introduction to Visual Arts I will be in session on Thursday nights. All will be on the Stone Ridge campus.

These courses are open to all students and qualified residents in the community. No previous art experience will be necessary.

Each course carries three college credits, but persons can take them without credit by auditing them.

In Painting I, individual creative expression is stressed in drawing, painting and composition through the use of various painting media. Space relationship and color visualization are emphasized.

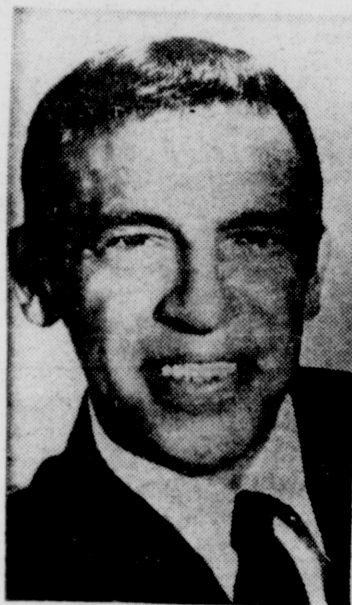

Art History I is a beginning survey of art history from antiquity through the Gothic period of history. There will be an evaluation of various art forms as influenced by tradition, social and religious conditions, technological progress, and industrial civilization.

In Drawing and Composition I, drawing will be considered as an art form with emphasis upon both disciplined draftsmanship and imaginative composition. There will be study of line, mass, structure, shades and form.

Introduction to Visual Arts will be a study of the interpretation of art as it affects history and the relation of art to history and our times. The studio course sets up problems in the visual arts for the student to solve according to his own experience. Field trip and demonstrations are included in the course.

Registration for evening courses for the Fall Semester will be held on the Stone Ridge campus from 7 to 9 p.m. on Sept. 5 and 6.

A LIVING LEGEND is drummer Buddy Rich. With his orchestra, he'll bring back the swing era again in the final program of the summer concert series at Hyde Park Playhouse, filling the stage with his special brand of music tonight, Sunday, Aug. 20 at 8 p. m. The long popular and durable Rich, who performed with Tommy Dorsey and Harry James, is appreciated as a fine musician who refuses to be over-bearing because he has already proved himself. He uses his drums to dramatize rather than epitomize, resulting in a keen balance which adds texture to his jazzy tapestries. Featuring his sax and trumpet men, Buddy comes in only when emphasis is needed on drums — and it'll all make for a romping, stomping concert tonight at Hyde Park.

Slithery Suspense

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—James Caan and Peter Boyle will co-star for MGM in "Slither," a contemporary suspense comedy.

Foreverness

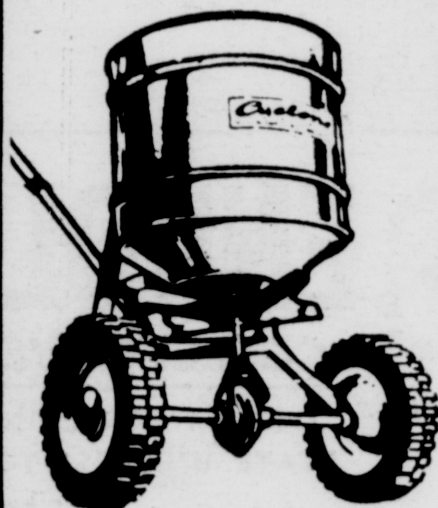

We may have coined a brand new word but now else would you express the permanence of love and at the very same time describe the diamond? Both go together. They belong together forever. Prince Valiant
IN THE DAYS OF
KING ARTHUR
BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: JASEN FINISHES HIS TALE OF THE INJUSTICE SUFFERED BY WARRIORS WHO HAD FOUGHT SO VALIANTLY FOR THEIR KING. HATRED FLASHES FROM HIS ONE EYE AS HE FINGERS THE KNIFE HE HAD PLEDGED TO SINK IN THE RIBS OF KING DASHAD, UNAWARE THAT THE CALM LITTLE FAT MAN BESIDE HIM IS THE KING!

PRINCE VALIANT HAD INDUCED THE KING TO COME ON THIS HUNTING TRIP IN DISGUISE SO THAT HE MIGHT LEARN SOMETHING OF HIS SUBJECTS AND BECOME LESS OF A DESPOT. HE AWAITS DASH'S REACTION.

"TELL ME, JASEN, ARE THERE MANY WHO, LIKE YOU, HAVE GONE UNREWARDED FOR THEIR SERVICE TO THEIR KING?" JASEN GLARES: "HALF THE BEGGARS IN ATHELDALE ARE CRIPPLED WAR VETERANS!" "I HAVE SOME INFLUENCE AT COURT," SAYS DASH, "COULD YOU GATHER THESE VETERANS TOGETHER AND PUT YOUR CASE BEFORE THE KING?"

"BAH!" SNARLS JASEN, "THE KING IS SURROUNDED BY FAWNING COURTIER WHO WAX WEALTHY ON HIS FAVORS. ONLY THE WEALTHY CAN AFFORD THE BRIBERY IT TAKES TO HAVE AUDIENCE WITH THE KING." THEREAFTER DASH IS LOST IN THOUGHT AND JASEN BUSIES HIMSELF WITH HIS COOKING POTS.

NOW THE BOATMEN TELL THEM THAT ON THE MORROW THEY WILL REACH THE HUNTING GROUNDS. SO IMPATIENT ARE THEY THAT THE OARS ARE MANNED TO SPEED THEM ON THEIR WAY.

AND DASH LAUGHS. FOR WHO WOULD BELIEVE THAT A MIGHTY KING WOULD PULL AT AN OAR BESIDE HUMBLE BOATMEN? THEN HIS SOFT HANDS BLISTERED.

FIELDS AND VILLAGES ARE LEFT BEHIND AND THE RIVER WINDS THROUGH A WILD BRUSH-COVERED PLAIN.
NEXT WEEK—The Lion

BLONDIE
by CHIC YOUNG

DAGWOOD, HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO TAKE ME OUT TO SOME FANCY PLACE FOR DINNER AND DANCING TONIGHT?

OH, PLEASE—JUST THIS ONCE, PLEASE

NO, I WORKED HARD ALL DAY AND I'M TOO TIRED

NO, I ABSOLUTELY REFUSE—SO JUST DROP IT!

OKAY, THEN—I'LL GO OUT BY MYSELF

JUST WHAT DO YOU THINK YOU'RE DOING?

I'M GETTING READY TO GO OUT

I'LL TAKE MY KEY IN CASE I COME HOME LATE

I WAS JUST GOING NEXT DOOR TO SHOW Tootsie MY NEW EVENING DRESS

WAIT! WAIT FOR ME! I'LL CHANGE MY CLOTHES AND GO WITH YOU

GOODY!

OKAY, I'M CHANGED AND ALL READY TO GO

GEE, THAT WAS FAST

TELL ME THE TRUTH—WERE YOU PLANNING TO GO ALL BY YOURSELF?

I WAS JUST GOING NEXT DOOR TO SHOW Tootsie MY NEW EVENING DRESS

JUST WHERE DID I LET THAT GET OUT OF HAND?
